Arms talks concluded

Soviet Leader Leonid Brezhnev, center, and U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, second from right, have concluded nuclear arms talks at the Kremlin. Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko is at left. Brezhnev announced at the opening of the talks that he hoped to go to Washington soon to sign the long-delayed new arms limitation pact, but warned than an agreement would have to be reached first. Arms pact closer, Kissinger reports

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger ended talks with Soviet leaders today and flew here to tell North Atlantic leaders that the Soviets have put forward "some significant and constructive new ideas" for a nuclear weapons treaty.

The package deal taking shape would reduce by about 10 per cent the strategic bombers and missiles allowed to either side. It would also provide a compromise on the two principal difficulties — Soviet Backfire bombers and American cruise missiles.

U.S. officials said that, while "a hell of a lot of work remains to be done," if all goes smoothly Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev could be in Washington as early as May to sign the new treaty with President Ford.

Kissinger evidently was much less successful in his Kremlin talks on Angola. He reminded Brezhnev that Soviet support for a Marxist faction in the African civil war was undercutting detente in the eyes of the American people. But Kissinger made no apparent headway.

The secretary of state said that a report by newsman John Scali, former U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, that Kissinger might resign because he couldn't persuade the Soviets to end their support of the Popular Movement (MPLA) in Angola was "ridiculous."

Despite the absence of a breakthrough in nuclear weapons negotiations, Kissinger and his top aides laid claim to "significant progress." Reporters were told at least two issues were essentially resolved — the definition of light and heavy missiles and how to deal with American cruise missiles launched from the air.

In Moscow, Gromyko also told reporters there was "movement forward on several matters."

At the airport before leaving Moscow, Kissinger said, "We settled some important issues which will be passed on to (the nuclear treaty negotiators at Geneva). We made good progress on other issues."

Specific measurements of both the size and the force of missiles will be established by agreement in order to avoid charges of treaty violations. U.S. officials acknowledged that a unilateral American definition under the 1972 interim agreement was ambiguous.

Bombers carrying long-range cruise missiles would count against the over-all U.S. total but short-range cruise missiles would not count.

Other issues that stand in the way of completing a treaty remain unresolved. "Another round or two" of talks between Kissinger and Brezhnev in Moscow may be necessary, a senior U.S. official said.

Under a 1974 understanding between Ford and Brezhnev, the two superpowers were to be limited to 2,400 strategic delivery vehicles each. For the past 14 months negotiations have stalled on how, or whether, to count the Soviet Backfire bombers and American cruise missiles against these totals.

The compromise now forming would lower the ceiling to about 2,150 while the Soviets would be permitted to have some 250 Backfires in addition to that total, provided they would not station them within striking distance of American population centers.

New doctors to locate here, Chamber is told

Plans to regulate door-to-door salesmen and turn over the Welcome to Sikeston highway signs to the city were approved at Thursday's Sikeston Area Chamber of Commerce meeting at Two-Tony's Smorgasbord.

The chamber also heard that two, and possibly five, doctors are planning to relocate in Sikeston this summer.

The plan to regulate salesmen would require them to have photo-identification cards made at the police station. Salesmen then would be required to show the ID cards when going door to door.

The plan requires the approval of the City Council.

The chamber also voted to turn over ownership of the four highway signs welcoming motorists to the city.

The chamber made the decision in hope of preventing the State Highway Department from eventually taking the signs down. Chamber members felt that if the signs are city property, the department will be reluctant to tear them down.

The action requires approval of the City Council.

Claude Benney told the chamber that two doctors will settle in Sikeston this summer. He said three more doctors are still considering moving here, and the city should know their decision by mid-February.

Benney said the medical committee has been working for a long time to recruit the doctors, and the work is finally paying off.

The chamber was told that March 4 has been set as the date for an Industrial Appreciation Dinner at the Holiday Inn. Planned as an annual event, the dinner will honor area industries and their contribution to the local economy.

Mass cancer screening project announced here

The American Cancer Society, Missouri Division, Inc. has announced it will fund a mass screening of all adults in Scott County for the detection of colorectal cancer.

At the suggestion of Dr. Max Heeb and Dr. Robert Ahlvin of Sikeston, the Scott County Cancer Board applied for a grant to be known as the Keith Collins Colorectal Cancer Screening Project, because his case demonstrated the critical need to detect cancer even before the symptons are apparent. Collins died of cancer in 1975.

Except for skin cancer, colorectal cancer is the most common single malignancy encountered in males and females alike. More than 49,000 people will die of this disease this year and it is estimated there will be 99,000 new cases of colorectal cancer this year. When detected at a non-invasive stage, colorectal cancer can be surgically curable.

According to Miss Linda Lawrence, area director of the American Cancer Society, this mass screening of the adult population of an entire county is virtually a pilot project in the United States. The week of April 1-8 has been designated as Cancer Detection Week in Scott County and sites will be set up in every town and village where each adult over 40 years of age may resiter and receive a test kit.

Mrs. Keith Collins of Sikeston has agreed to be Chairman of this project and Dr. Robert Ahlvin, pathologist, will be medical advisor, read all tests and diagnose results.

4 caught in bogus bill case

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Four men have been arrested in southeast Missouri this week for passing or distributing counterfeit $10 and $20 bills, the Secret Service said.

Robert Lilley, Secret Service chief in St. Louis, said bogus bills apparently made from the same engraving plates had been found in Missouri, Arkansas and Tennessee.

Lilley said the search is continuing for the manufacturer of the bogus money.

Authorities said two undercover agents Wednesday negotiated to buy $15,000 in counterfeit money from Floyd Russell Warnick, 50, of Poplar Bluff, Mo.

Arrested with Warnick was Carl Gene Spurlock, 46, of Knobel, Ark. The two were being held in lieu of $25,000 bond each.

More than $32,000 in counterfeit money was seized, including $12,000 printed on large sheets of paper ready to be cut to size. Also found were bills torn in half which had manufacturing defects.

Sikeston police arrested Lloyd Ray Parker, 30, of Cardwell and Thomas Earl Neel, 18, of Arbyrd Wednesday, after

Testimony heard in drug cases

CHARLESTON — Preliminary hearings for five Mississippi County men, arrested Dec. 5, 1975 in an area-wide drug raid conducted by the highway patrol and local sheriff's departments were held Thursday before Magistrate Judge T. J. Borwn Jr.

Hershel Witty of East Prairie was bound over to Circuit Court for trial on the charge of selling a controlled substance (marijuana) and is to appear Feb. 10.

Rulings in the cases against David Bright, Phillip Caralyle and Rick Witty of East Prairie and Dale Morgan of Charleston, all charged with selling a controlled substance, were reserved by Judge Brown until Feb. 19. The additional time was given defense attorneys to produce Roy Vernon Dean of East Prairie, who they had subpoenaed as a witness.

Testifying during the five separate and lengthy preliminaries were Highway Patrol Troopers Edward Moses, Robert Gartner and Sidney Shippy of Jefferson City, who came to the Bootheel area about January of 1975 as undercover investigators. The three officers appeared Thursday with beards and mustaches and long hair. During testimony the officers said they also wore mod-style clothes during their undercover intelligence investigation.

Hershel Witty is accused of selling marijuana to the officers on April 3, 1975. According to testimony, Witty came to the mobile home of Dale Crump in East Prairie sometime after 6:30 p.m. April 3, addressed himself to Crump and told him he "had some lids".

Troopers Moses and Gartner, Roy Vernon Dean, Crump and another person called Richard, were in the home at the time Witty arrived.

The officers drove Witty to a house on Imogene St., then to a store where he purchased some plastic bags. After driving around a short while, Witty was taken to a green house trailer, where he went in and a short

Father and son wounded

MORLEY — A father and son were wounded about 9:15 p.m. Thursday when a 30.- caliber rifle they were cleaning discharged and struck them both.

Bob Harris and his 17- year - old son Kenneth were treated and released in the emergency room at Missouri Delta Community Hospital. The elder Harris suffered a bullet wound in the lower left leg and the son suffered a wound to finger.

Scott County Deputy Sheriff Gerald Inman said the two were cleaning the rifle and setting the sight when it went off. Apparently, they did not realize the gun was loaded, Inman said.

Hearnes attacks 'big government'

CHAFFEE — "Big government philosophy, which has prevailed in Congress for the past decade, has produced a federal government which is too costly, too obstrusive, too unresponsive and too inefficient," former Gov. Warren E. Hearnes of Charleston told the Chaffee Chamber of Commerce Thursday.

Hearnes spoke at the installation ceremony for Chamber of Commerce officers conducted at the Elks Lodge.

"The federal government is fast becoming a dinosaur, too big and awkward to survive as an effective instrument for progressivve change," Hearnes said. "I believe it is absolutely necessary that we take steps to bring deficit spending undr control and to reorganize and streamline the mammoth federal bureacracy."

Hearnes said that in the past two years, the government has had as much deficit spending as had occurred in the past 18 years combined. The federal budget has more than doubled just since 1969, he said.

Hearnes quoted a r ecent estimate of the National Taxpayers Union which said that to finance this debt, Americans are paying $5,700 per minute in interest.

Increasingly, the operations of the federal government are

Bids opened, all too high

The Sikeston Housing Authority Board opened bids Thursday on a 3,000 - foot addition for a kitchen and multipurpose room at the Heritage House, 305 Cresap Place.

All three bids were over the $100,000 allotted for the addition, according to Bill Hanna, executive director of the housing authority.

Bids submitted included: Ryan Construction Co., $184,618; Ralph Boyer, Construction Co. $189,000; and Bien Construction Co. of exter, $188,000.

Hanna said the architect was asked to meet with Ryan Construction Co. to see what could be done to lower the cost of the addition.

He said the housing authority is trying to get additional funding, but added that it cannot get an additional $88,000.

If costs could be cut about $40,000, the project could probably proceed, he said.

2 charged with burglary

Wayne Lee Harris, 19, of Route Three and Jimmie Hicks, 17, of Route Four have been charged with burglary and stealing in connection with a break-in Monday night at the Vester Phillips home in Morley and are being held in the Scott County jail at Benton.

An eight-track stereo system and a 19-inch television set valued at between $700 and $800 were taken from the home and have been recovered in Dexter, according to Scott County Sheriff John Dennis.

Harris was picked up Tuesday and Hicks was taken into custody Thursday. They were being held on $500 bond.

Checking the gear

For firemen like Jim Terrell, duty days begin with an equipment check. There are nine city firemen who work hour shifts. Their work week averages 60 hours. The men eat and sleep at the stations, ready to respond quickly. Firemen say they can have a truck anywhere in the city within three minutes of receiving a call. (Daily Standard photo)

CLEAN LIVING ADDS YEARS TO LIFE

Physical fitness buffs have long maintained that their regimen not only made them feel better — it actually was adding years to their lifespan. A California study has now given a strong scientific boost to those claims.

"Men can add 11 years to their lives and women seven years by following seven simple rules of clean living," found the study, as reported in the January newsletter of the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports. The study was conducted by the California Health Department's Human Population Library.

The seven rules:

1. Get the right amount of sleep — seven hours a night for women, eight for men.
2. Eat a good breakfast each day.
3. Eat three meals a day at regular times and avoid snacks.
4. Exercise regularly, preferably by participating in sports.
5. Control your weight.
6. Drink moderately — no more than one or two drinks daily.
7. Don't smoke cigarettes.

"A man of 45 who observes six or all of these rules can expect to live, on the average, to age 78," says Dr. Nedra Belloc, one of the authors of the study's report. "The man who observes three or fewer rules will be fortunate to reach 67," she adds.

The Dean of the School of Public Health at UCLA says this about the study's findings: "The daily habits of people have a great deal more to do with what makes them sick and when they die than do all the influences of medicine. A man at age 55 who follows all seven good health habits has the same physical health status as a person 25 to 30 years younger who follows less than two."

Ponce de Leon and others sought but failed to find the legendary Fountain of Youth. Following these seven rules of health, individual citizens have the opportunity to succeed where Ponce de Leon failed.

LABELING AIRLINE LUGGAGE

RARE AMONG REGULAR air travelers is the person without a tale to tell of lost luggage.

It went off the plane at the wrong stop. Or it didn't get changed from one plane to another. Or it stayed aboard when the passenger deplaned. Or it looked like one of a dozen other red or gray suitcases and was grabbed and hurried away by the wrong person—making two people who had lost their luggage.

It's little wonder that misplaced luggage constitutes one of the major complaints against airlines. And little wonder that starting under a new rule by the Civil Aeronatuics Board, all air luggage checked through by passengers must bear personal identification.

What is surprising is that it has taken so long to bring about this regulation.

Airlines have tried for years to get travelers to voluntarily use name and address stickers. For some odd reason—possibly because many people just balk at being regimented—the volunteer effort has failed.

There still is resistance from people who do not want their names publicized. Fortunately for them, the new rule does permit covered tags.

MOST TRAVELERS, we would think, would rejoice in this new effort to make the recovery of one's luggage at the point of destination more efficient. And whatever would speed an errant suitcase to its right owner should be welcome.

Above all, it ought to be gratifying not to have to hold a debate by the luggage dump with some oversized athlete who thinks your two-suiter belongs to him.

HOW TO PAY FOR LONG ILLNESS?

The cost of extended medical treatment still can mean financial ruin in America. Even though other countries have come to grips with the problem and dealt with it in a forthright manner, the United States has done little that is substantive to correct a bad situation.

In Europe, victims of disease who could not otherwise afford treatment, receive health care subsidized by the government. Major illness does not mean bankruptcy to Europeans.

Medical insurance cannot support a heart patient indefinitely, nor can it handle the cost of a kidney dialysis process for very long. Rare diseases, such as aplastic anemia, cannot begin to be treated within the limits of medical insurance.

Medical costs are, in the main, fixed. It is expensive to purchase and maintain equipment, to pay salaries of qualified attendants, to procure medical supplies and to fund post-operative care. Even if a surgeon were to waive his personal fee, which some do, the expense still would be enormous.

Special funds are frequently started to defray the costs. Sometimes enthusiastic supporters can manage to raise sufficient money. Other times, they can't. But the public cannot be expected to come through time and again for the same, or a variety of similar causes, no matter how worthy.

Senator Edward Kennedy recently supported a bill which takes the view that the Federal Government should undertake the payment of costs related to treatment of certain medical conditions, such as hemophilia. That bill is now law. Opponents of socialized medicine see this as an unmistakeable harbinger of a more far reaching and insidious in-road to private interests than it really is. For one thing, any one of the legislative opponents who might be stricken with a qualifying illness or condition, would change his tune quickly—after all, who wants to be financially destroyed?

And another thing, paying for a bone marrow transplant seems at least as important as a hundred things for which federal funds are spent daily. The soil bank, just to name one.

Like so many things which are unpleasant, few want to get involved until involvement is thrust upon them. To those faced with the situation of financing extended care for a loved one, the logic of a government financed program becomes crystal clear.

However, hemophilia is not the only illness that can create financial disaster; more legislation is needed. The cost is great, and all taxpayers become contributors, but since every taxpayer is a potential beneficiary, that's the way it should be.

MERRY CHRISTMAS AND 1976 WITHOUT INFLATION WILL BE A HAPPY NEW YEAR

Ten to fifteen percent Unemployed also, means 85 to 90 percent of the work force are receiving wages regularly and many, more wages, than they ever received before. Our current National problem is INFLATION not recession. Write your Congressman and two Senators—"No more Inflation for 1976."

1933—My wages had been cut five times! I was doing as responsible engineering work as I have done since for forty dollars per week and was fortunate to have a job at any price. My employer had laid-off two employees out of every three. But !!!, the prices of food and things were going down every day. I bought a hand tailor-made Harris tweed suit for fity dollars. That was a Depression.

1974—A suit of equal cloth quality, but factory-made cost two hundred and fifty dollars. The settlement of a strike by the employees of Hart Schaffner & Marx was a part of that $250. Write your Congressman and two Senators to repeal the exemption of the Labor Unions from the Antitrust Laws. That repeal will help reduce Inflation.

1975— My activities were similar to those of former years except that the time and cost of a tour to a foreign country were devoted to thecalculations, design and construction of a laboratory size shelled corn dryer. "A this point in time" corn is shelled in the field directly from the stalk. To prevent shattering the harvest begins when the moisture in the kernel reduces to twenty five percent. For safe storage the moisture must be below seventeen percent, and for sale without being penalized for excessive moisture, fifteen and one half percent.

Most of the farmers around Raymond have propane gas fired dryers. In 1974 the increase in the price of propane made corn drying expensive. Also there was fear of a shortage of the gas. Calculations indicate that my dryer will reduce the energy consumption by ninety percent, if the maximum construction is used. Balancing first cost against energy cost the optimum reduction of energy would be seventy percent. The laboratory size dryer does 300 pounds of shelled corn per hour. A few machines in this area shell 9,000 pounds of corn per hour. In 1976 I hope to be able to finance a dryer with a cpacity of 6,000 pounds per hour, which is successful will satisfy the needs of the average size farm. I am doing something about the "energy crunch."

EYEBROWS IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON — The appointment of Marion Javits to the job of promoting Iran National Airlines has raised some eyebrows in Washington, where eyebrow-raising is the national sport.

The problem is that in order to work for a foreign government Ms. Javits had to register as a lobbyist. Her husband, Sen. Jack Javits, is on the Senate Foreigh Relations Committee which occasionally discusses the subject of Iran. The eyebrow-raisers in Washington believe that there could be a conflict of interest in the two jobs. Ms. Javits insists there isn't, and she would never discuss Iran with her husband.

But it could be a sticky situation.

Sen. Javits comes home to New York for a weekend with his wife.

"Hi, dear. What's for dinner?" he asks.

"I have a surprise for you," Ms. Javits says. "Caspian caviar just flown in from Iran on its new super 747 Boeing Jet, which now flies to 60 countries in every part of the world."

"What else?"

"Flaming shish kebab on a sword, and a new recipe for Persian rice which the Shah's chef gave me."

"It sounds great," the senator says.

"It is one of the many dishes featured on one of the world's best and safest airlines. When it comes to food, Iran National Airlines treats you like a Shah."

"That's a lovely dress you're wearing, Marion."

"It comes from Tehran. You can't believe the shopping bargains you can find in this beautiful historical city. It's a tourist's dream. This dress cost me $45, and it's hand-woven. If I bought it in New York, it would have been $200. You actually can make up the cost of your air fare on Iran National Airlines by just visiting one of the many exciting bazaars throughout the city."

"Well, it's very becoming. What have you been doing all week?"

"Oh, I've been keeping busy. I went to the Persian art exhibit at the Met, and I saw the Iranian Ballet at Lincoln Center, and I entertained a group of travel agents from Detroit."

"That's nice."

"Jack, do you know that you can fly from New York to Tehran and stop over in London and Paris for as long as you want to at no extra charge by taking advantage of Iran National Airlines' special winter rates?"

"I must admit I didn't."

"The sad thing is that Iran National Airlines does not have landing rights in St. Louis and Houston. It seems so unfair that people have to change planes at Kennedy Airport in order to go to Tehran."

"I imagine it does. Say, aren't these new dishes?"

"Yes. Each one has a picture of the Shah and his wife on it. I got them wholesale from the people who cater Iran National Airlines."

"They're very attractive," the senator says.

"Have as much caviar as you want. I have oodles of it in the icebox," Ms. Javits says.

"Isn't it expensive, Marion?"

"Not for us. I'm working now. I make $67,500 a year."

"No kidding. What are you doing?"

"I can't tell you, Jack, as it would be a conflict of interest. I promised I would never discuss my job with you as it would only cause raised eyebrows in Washington."

"Can you give me a hint?"

"All right, but just a teeny one. What would you like with your dinner -- coffee, tea or milk?"

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
Politics of the Energy Bill
with LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — Energy Czar Frank Zarb would have followed Labor Secretary John Dunlop out of the government if President Ford had vetoed the energy bill as he did the common situs labor bill.

Sources close to Zarb say he was ready to resign, effective in April, if he had been hit with a veto. For the doughty little ex-broker had spent months hammering out a bill which sets a new national oil policy.

Zarb worked 16-hour days to patch together a compromise. Even when his duties took him out of town, he set up extra phone in his hotel roomsand kept burning the wires to Capitol Hill.

The compromise bill satisfied no one, least of all the oil companies, but it was the best that could clear Congress. The oil barons made a final, powerful effort to pressure President Ford into vetoin the bill.

The showdown came on November 13 behind closed White House doors. The President called in top congressional Republicans to hear Zarb present his arguments against a veto.

He and his deputies, John Hill and Eric Zausner, ran into a hailstorm of opposition from conservative Republicans, some of them primed with arguments by the oil companies.

Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, made a vitriolic personal attack upon Hill, charging that he had undercut conservative Republic an leaders on oil policy. More politely, Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., made the same point.

The President, who had backed Zarb, was shaken by the opposition. By the end of the two-hour meeting, the conservatives were convinced the measure would be vetoed.

But the indefatigable Zarb didn't gie up. He inveigled a ride on Air Force One for the first lap of the President's trip to China. All the way to Alaska, Zarb lobblied the President.

After Ford's return, Zarb kept it up until the President signed the bill on Decmeber 22.

Footnote: Zarb's closest friends confirmed that a veto would have brought his resignation. Zarb himself would tell us only: "The battle is over. I don't want to talk about it."

POISONED FIELDS: The field workers, who helped make America the best fed nation in history, are themselves often undernourished. Now there is evidence that they are also being poisoned by pesticides.

From California to Florida, crop sprays are bringing sickness and death to stoop laborers.

This had led Dr. Joseph Swartz, a biophyusicist doing research for the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) in California, to call field work "one of the most hazardous occupations." His conclusion is based on "time lost tro occupational illnesses."

Poor living conditions and health hazards have combined to give the farm worker an average life span of only 49 years-- 21 years less than the national average.

Yet the EPA, which is supposed to be the nation's environmental watchdog, has failed to protect workers from the menace of sprayed fields. Here are the shocking facts:

--The Natioinal Farmworkers Informatrion Clearing Houe (NFIC) has prepared a survey to determine the number of deaths and illnesses from exposure to pesiticdes. Yet EPA has not sent this vital health survey tro 125 migrant health clinics.

-- Under pressure from the growers, EPA also quashed an earlier NFIC project, the pesticide hotline, which wouldhave provided a toll-free telephone number for field hands to report poisoning incidents.

-EPA has made only a token effort to enforce EPA regulations on the farm. Many farmers disregard the regulations and spray their crops with reckless abandon. Yet EPA has assigned only an average of one inspector per state to protect the public from poisoned fields. Even those farmers caught violating EPA's pesticide regulations risk no more than a warning for a first offense.

-- For that matter, the EPA doesn't have adequate facilities to determine whether the pesticides it certifies for commercial use are actually safe. Instead, the agency relies almost entirely on the dubious data provided by the pesticide manufacturers.

One reason for EPA's failure to control pesticides is the power of the agribusiness lobby, which is more interested in protecting crops than workers.

The lobby has an extrraordinary influence over the House Agriculture Committee, particularly its 76-year-oild vice chairman, Rep. W. R. Poage. The old man grew up on a ranch in Throckmorton County, Tex., and he is more simpatico with big ranchers than small stoop laborers.

The House Agriculture Committee has brought enough quiet pressure to bear on EPA, meanwhile, to prevent enforcement of the pesticide regulations.

The effectg can be measured in stark human terms. Consider these reports, for example, from Florida.

-- Last November ten field hands, three of them women, were hospitalized with severe nausea, skin rashes and dizziness after goiing into a sprayed tomato field.

-- A farm worker at Del Ray, Fla., entered a tomatoe field after it had been sprayed with four different toxic pesticides. Thereafter, he developed a skin rash resembling leprosy and has been unable to return to work.

-- In 1973, a woman stoop laborer left a field which had just been sprayed. She complained of nausea and shortness of breath. Thirty minutes later, she died.

Footnote: An EPA spokesman told us his agency lacked facilities to doublecheck adequately the pesticide industry's data. The EPA, he said, may release the NFIC survey in the future. The spokesman conceded that the pesticide hotline had been cancelled and that less than one inspecto per state was assigned to check farm poisonings.

Also Aids Mafia:

FBI and CIA were praised for actions by those now crippling the agencies

WASHINGTON — Pandora's box was a musical toy compared with what the network of left-wing "citizens groups" and ambitious Congress people are ripping open in their drive to discredit munieipal police, FBI, CIA and to her counter-intelligence services.

These citizens bands (some of them subsidized by federal funds) and U.S. Senators aren't only destroying the system of informers, surveillance and secret cover, but are publicizing undercover agents' names, addresses, apartment and office numbers and phone listings.

If, for example, as happened in Chicago, a private citizens committee can obtain and make public the police department's computerized payroll printout, addresses and phone numbers included, what's to prevent Mafia fronts, and they do exist, from also zeroing in?

If undercover agents and informers on police rosters are "exposed" for infiltrating new radical and violent revolutionary organizations and cells, what's to prevent the exposure and death of young police men and women informers who infiltrate dope-smuggling rings?

If the left can print the names of thousands of police, why wouldn't paramilitary groups such as the Minute Men seek out files of leftist, Trotskyite or Communist names and circulate their home addresses and phone numbers?

If the police and FBI informers "dry up," what will happen in cases such as that of Clarence Mitchell, the NAACP's District of Columbia director? His Maryland home was the bombing target of a Ku Klux Klan conspiracy in the early '60s. He and his domicile were saved when an FBI informer phoned the Bureau. It moved swiftly and saved Mr. Mitchell and his house. And the late National Urban League leader Whitney Young was similarly saved from a black action group plot.

Much is made of the FBI's old "Cointel Pro," the Counter Intelligence Program. Regularly it is re-publicized and abused by the Congress and well-organized "outraged" citizens. But no one has reported that J. Edgar Hoover regularly secretly briefed the House Appropriations Committee, the National Security Council, the Attorneys General and the President of the U.S. on Cointel.

Many government and FBI officials and their predecessors can take an oat h on this – and to the fact that the Congress, the very same Congress which now is abuisng the FBI, urged it to move against what was believed to be fiery insurrection regardless of the FBI jurisdiction. Move on the President's executive authority, they said. There was insurrection. The neo-radicals burned libraries, universities, threw deans down the stairs, besieged campuses. There were deaths. Hundreds of innocents were injured. Property damages ran to scores of millions of dollars.

Well, just read the ultra-modern law and order literature, especially that issued by the International Association of Chiefs of Police. Nothing red-necked or Neanderthal about that. But why not squads for aliens and bombs? There are plenty of both – the Immigration and Naturalization Service reports there are eight million illegal aliens in the U.S. occupying at least one million jobs and costing the U.S. $13 billion annually.

And the tragic victims at LaGuardia Airport grimly attest to the number of bombs.

Unhampered undercover agents might have preventec that blast. But New York City special intelligence unit files had to be destroyed. A committee is screaming for the Baltimore police files. And Sen. Frank Church was told to go to hell when he asked the San Francisco police chief to send along a list of the latter's undercover agents.

Today this nation finds itself in 1984. Orwellian reportage. Love is hate. Hate is love. Aesopian language. In some circles it's a badge of honor to betray one's comrades in the Central Intelligence Agency by listing their names, stations, duties, home addresses and phone numbers. Why then was it so horrendous for anti-Communist and former Communists to list names of Communists and former comrades in Hollywood during the Korean War? That was called a blacklist. Well, what is the listing of current CIA agents? A death list.

Some 150 CIA agents, including station chiefs, have been publicized in many foreign countries, address and all. At the very least, isn't this an invasion of privacy? CIA agents aren't all spies. They can be half cloak and half dagger. Or no dagger at all.

Some are researchers, statisticians, political analysts, gladhanders. And they serve our nation well. I can recall in Caracas, the emotional embracing of one of our U.S. Embassy attaches by a VEnezuelan President. That attache may have been a CIA employee. His assignment merely was to know whom to befriend and entertain socially and intellectually. That's all. He knew where the power blocs were.

The danger isn't so much in the exposure of the agents to the KGB (of whom ther are 400,000). Nikita Khrushchev once told Jack Kennedy -- why don't we save ourselves all that counter-intelligence money, we know everything about each other, let's just tell each other.

The great danger is as much in the exposure of the nation's police and FBI, as well as CIA, intelligence infrastructure for exploitation by violence-prone neo-revolutionaries. The danger is in fingering informers, undercover operators and infiltrators to the underworld as well as to the undercover world.

And Marxists should know their Hegel better. First, thesis. Then antithesis. Then synthesis. Then – boom. Ideological battles are one thing. Hacking away at the safety of our cities and nation is another, bloodier matter.

CLEAN LIVING ADDS YEARS TO LIFE

Physical fitness buffs have long maintained that their regimen not only made them feel better — it actually was adding years to their lifespan. A California study has now given a strong scientific boost to those claims.

"Men can add 11 years to their lives and women seven years by following seven simple rules of clean living," found the study, as reported in the January newsletter of the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports. The study was conducted by the California Health Department's Human Population Library.

The seven rules:

1. Get the right amount of sleep — seven hours a night for women, eight for men.
2. Eat a good breakfast each day.
3. Eat three meals a day at regular times and avoid snacks.
4. Exercise regularly, preferably by participating in sports.
5. Control your weight.
6. Drink moderately — no more than one or two drinks daily.
7. Don't smoke cigarettes.

"A man of 45 who observes six or all of these rules can expect to live, on the average, to age 78," says Dr. Nedra Belloc, one of the authors of the study's report. "The man who observes three or fewer rules will be fortunate to reach 67," she adds.

The Dean of the School of Public Health at UCLA says this about the study's findings: "The daily habits of people have a great deal more to do with what makes them sick and when they die than do all the influences of medicine. A man at age 55 who follows all seven good health habits has the same physical health status as a person 25 to 30 years younger who follows less than two."

Ponce de Leon and others sought but failed to find the legendary Fountain of Youth. Following these seven rules of health, individual citizens have the opportunity to succeed where Ponce de Leon failed.

MERRY CHRISTMAS AND 1976 WITHOUT INFLATION WILL BE A HAPPY NEW YEAR

Ten to fifteen percent Unemployed also, means 85 to 90 percent of the work force are receiving wages regularly and many, more wages, than they ever received before. Our current National problem is INFLATION not recession. Write your Congressman and two Senators—"No more Inflation for 1976."

1933—My wages had been cut five times! I was doing as responsible engineering work as I have done since for forty dollars per week and was fortunate to have a job at any price. My employer had laid-off two employees out of every three. But !!!, the prices of food and things were going down every day. I bought a hand tailor-made Harris tweed suit for fity dollars. That was a Depression.

1974—A suit of equal cloth quality, but factory-made cost two hundred and fifty dollars. The settlement of a strike by the employees of Hart Schaffner & Marx was a part of that $250. Write your Congressman and two Senators to repeal the exemption of the Labor Unions from the Antitrust Laws. That repeal will help reduce Inflation.

1975—My activities were similar to those of former years except that the time and cost of a tour to a foreign country were devoted to thecalculations, design and construction of a laboratory size shelled corn dryer. "A this point in time" corn is shelled in the field directly from the stalk. To prevent shattering the harvest begins when the moisture in the kernel reduces to twenty five percent. For safe storage the moisture must be below seventeen percent, and for sale without being penalized for excessive moisture, fifteen and one half percent.

Most of the farmers around Raymond have propane gas fired dryers. In 1974 the increase in the price of propane made corn drying expensive. Also there was fear of a shortage of the gas. Calculations indicate that my dryer will reduce the energy consumption by ninety percent, if the maximum construction is used. Balancing first cost against energy cost the optimum reduction of energy would be seventy percent. The laboratory size dryer does 300 pounds of shelled corn per hour. A few machines in this area shell 9,000 pounds of corn per hour. In 1976 I hope to be able to finance a dryer with a cpacity of 6,000 pounds per hour, which is successful will satisfy the needs of the average size farm. I am doing something about the "energy crunch."

DRUG PROBLEM IS HERE

Recent facts that have come to light as a result of violations of the law in Monroe County convince most people that our county has a drug problem just as surely as do the large ccenters of population.

Here it is on a smaller scale of course, and seldom comes to the attention of the public.

But it surfaces every now and then.

EYEBROWS IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON — The appointment of Marion Javits to the job of promoting Iran National Airlines has raised some eyebrows in Washington, where eyebrow-raising is the national sport.

The problem is that in order to work for a foreign government Ms. Javits had to register as a lobbyist. Her husband, Sen. Jack Javits, is on the Senate Foreigh Relations Committee which occasionally discusses the subject of Iran. The eyebrow-raisers in Washington believe that there could be a conflict of interest in the two jobs. Ms. Javits insists there isn't, and she would never discuss Iran with her husband.

But it could be a sticky situation.

Sen. Javits comes home to New York for a weekend with his wife.

"Hi, dear. What's for dinner?" he asks.

"I have a surprise for you," Ms. Javits says. "Caspian caviar just flown in from Iran on its new super 747 Boeing Jet, which now flies to 60 countries in every part of the world."

"What else?"

"Flaming shish kebab on a sword, and a new recipe for Persian rice which the Shah's chef gave me."

"It sounds great," the senator says.

"That's a lovely dress you're wearing, Marion."

"It comes from Tehran. You can't believe the shopping bargains you can find in this beautiful historical city. It's a tourist's dream. This dress cost me $45, and it's hand-woven. If I bought it in New York, it would have been $200. You actually can make up the cost of your air fare on Iran National Airlines by just visiting one of the many exciting bazaars throughout the city."

"Well, it's very becoming. What have you been doing all week?"

"Oh, I've been keeping busy. I went to the Persian art exhibit at the Met, and I saw the Iranian Ballet at Lincoln Center, and I entertained a group of travel agents from Detroit."

"That's nice."

"Jack, do you know that you can fly from New York to Tehran and stop over in London and Paris for as long as you want to at no extra charge by taking advantage of Iran National Airlines' special winter rates?"

"I must admit I didn't."

"The sad thing is that Iran National Airlines does not have landing rights in St. Louis and Houston. It seems so unfair that people have to change planes at Kennedy Airport in order to go to Tehran."

"I imagine it does. Say, aren't these new dishes?"

"Yes. Each one has a picture of the Shah and his wife on it. I got them wholesale from the people who cater Iran National Airlines."

"They're very attractive," the senator says.

"Have as much caviar as you want. I have oodles of it in the icebox," Ms. Javits says.

"Isn't it expensive, Marion?"

"Not for us. I'm working now. I make $67,500 a year."

"No kidding. What are you doing?"

"I can't tell you, Jack, as it would be a conflict of interest. I promised I would never discuss my job with you as it would only cause raised eyebrows in Washington."

"Can you give me a hint?"

"All right, but just a teeny one. What would you like with your dinner -- coffee, tea or milk?"

JACK ANDERSON SAYS: Politics of the Energy Bill with LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — Energy Czar Frank Zarb would have followed Labor Secretary John Dunlop out of the government if President Ford had vetoed the energy bill as he did the common situs labor bill.

Sources close to Zarb say he was ready to resign, effective in April, if he had been hit with a veto. For the doughty little ex-broker had spent months hammering out a bill which sets a new national oil policy.

Zarb worked 16-hour days to patch together a compromise. Even when his duties took him out of town, he set up extra phone in his hotel roomsand kept burning the wires to Capitol Hill.

The compromise bill satisfied no one, least of all the oil companies, but it was the best that could clear Congress. The oil barons made a final, powerful effort to pressure President Ford into vetoin the bill.

The showdown came on November 13 behind closed White House doors. The President called in top congressional Republicans to hear Zarb present his arguments against a veto.

He and his deputies, John Hill and Eric Zausner, ran into a hailstorm of opposition from conservative Republicans, some of them primed with arguments by the oil companies.

Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, made a vitriolic personal attack upon Hill, charging that he had undercut conservative Republic an leaders on oil policy. More politely, Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., made the same point.

The President, who had backed Zarb, was shaken by the opposition. By the end of the two-hour meeting, the conservatives were convinced the measure would be vetoed.

But the indefatigable Zarb didn't gie up. He inveigled a ride on Air Force One for the first lap of the President's trip to China. All the way to Alaska, Zarb lobblied the President.

After Ford's return, Zarb kept it up until the President signed the bill on Decmeber 22.

Footnote: Zarb's closest friends confirmed that a veto would have brought his resignation. Zarb himself would tell us only: "The battle is over. I don't want to talk about it."

POISONED FIELDS: The field workers, who helped make America the best fed nation in history, are themselves often undernourished. Now there is evidence that they are also being poisoned by pesticides.

From California to Florida, crop sprays are bringing sickness and death to stoop laborers.

This had led Dr. Joseph Swartz, a biophyusicist doing research for the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) in California, to call field work "one of the most hazardous occupations." His conclusion is based on "time lost tro occupational illnesses."

Poor living conditions and health hazards have combined to give the farm worker an average life span of only 49 years— 21 years less than the national average.

Yet the EPA, which is supposed to be the nation's environmental watchdog, has failed to protect workers from the menace of sprayed fields. Here are the shocking facts:

--The Natioinal Farmworkers Informatrion Clearing Houe (NFIC) has prepared a survey to determine the number of deaths and illnesses from exposure to pesiticdes. Yet EPA has not sent this vital health survey tro 125 migrant health clinics.

-- Under pressure from the growers, EPA also quashed an earlier NFIC project, the pesticide hotline, which wouldhave provided a toll-free telephone number for field hands to report poisoning incidents.

--EPA has made only a token effort to enforce EPA regulations on the farm. Many farmers disregard the regulations and spray their crops with reckless abandon. Yet EPA has assigned only an average of one inspector per state to protect the public from poisoned fields. Even those farmers caught violating EPA's pesticide regulations risk no more than a warning for a first offense.

-- For that matter, the EPA doesn't have adequate facilities to determine whether the pesticides it certifies for commercial use are actually safe. Instead, the agency relies almost entirely on the dubious data provided by the pesticide manufacturers.

One reason for EPA's failure to control pesticides is the power of the agribusiness lobby, which is more interested in protecting crops than workers.

The lobby has an extrraordinary influence over the House Agriculture Committee, particularly its 76-year-oild vice chairman, Rep. W. R. Poage. The old man grew up on a ranch in Throckmorton County, Tex., and he is more simpatico with big ranchers than small stoop laborers.

The House Agriculture Committee has brought enough quiet pressure to bear on EPA, meanwhile, to prevent enforcement of the pesticide regulations.

The effectg can be measured in stark human terms. Consider these reports, for example, from Florida.

-- Last November ten field hands, three of them women, were hospitalized with severe nausea, skin rashes and dizziness after going into a sprayed tomato field.

-- A farm worker at Del Ray, Fla., entered a tomatoe field after it had been sprayed with four different toxic pesticides. Thereafter, he developed a skin rash resembling leprosy and has been unable to return to work.

-- In 1973, a woman stoop laborer left a field which had just been sprayed. She complained of nausea and shortness of breath. Thirty minutes later, she died.

Footnote: An EPA spokesman told us his agency lacked facilities to doublecheck adequately the pesticide industry's data. The EPA, he said, may release the NFIC survey in the future. The spokesman conceded that the pesticide hotline had been cancelled and that less than one inspecto per state was assigned to check farm poisonings.

Also Aids Mafia:

FBI and CIA were praised for actions by those now crippling the agencies

WASHINGTON — Pandora's box was a musical toy compared with what the network of left-wing "citizens groups" and ambitious Congress people are ripping open in their drive to discredit munieipal police, FBI, CIA and to her counter-intelligence services.

These citizens bands (some of them subsidized by federal funds) and U.S. Senators aren't only destroying the system of informers, surveillance and secret cover, but are publicizing undercover agents' names, addresses, apartment and office numbers and phone listings.

If, for example, as happened in Chicago, a private citizens committee can obtain and make public the police department's computerized payroll printout, addresses and phone numbers included, what's to prevent Mafia fronts, and they do exist, from also zeroing in?

If undercover agents and informers on police rosters are "exposed" for infiltrating new radical and violent revolutionary organizations and cells, what's to prevent the exposure and death of young police men and women informers who infiltrate dope-smuggling rings?

If the left can print the names of thousands of police, why wouldn't paramilitary groups such as the Minute Men seek out files of leftist, Trotskyite or Communist names and circulate their home addresses and phone numbers?

If the police and FBI informers "dry up," what will happen in cases such as that of Clarence Mitchell, the NAACP's District of Columbia director? His Maryland home was the bombing target of a Ku Klux Klan conspiracy in the early '60s. He and his domicile were saved when an FBI informer phoned the Bureau. It moved swiftly and saved Mr. Mitchell and his house. And the late National Urban League leader Whitney Young was similarly saved from a black action group plot.

Much is made of the FBI's old "Cointel Pro," the Counter Intelligence Program. Regularly it is re-publicized and abused by the Congress and well-organized "outraged" citizens. But no one has reported that J. Edgar Hoover regularly secretly briefed the House Appropriations Committee, the National Security Council, the Attorneys General and the President of the U.S. on Cointel.

Many government and FBI officials and their predecessors can take an oat h on this – and to the fact that the Congress, the very same Congress which now is abuisng the FBI, urged it to move against what was believed to be fiery insurrection regardless of the FBI jurisdiction. Move on the President's executive authority, they said. There was insurrection. The neo-radicals burned libraries, universities, threw deans down the stairs, besieged campuses. There were deaths. Hundreds of innocents were injured. Property damages ran to scores of millions of dollars.

Well, just read the ultra-modern law and order literature, especially that issued by the International Association of Chiefs of Police. Nothing red-necked or Neanderthal about that. But why not squads for aliens and bombs? There are plenty of both – the Immigration and Naturalization Service reports there are eight million illegal aliens in the U.S. occupying at least one million jobs and costing the U.S. $13 billion annually.

And the tragic victims at LaGuardia Airport grimly attest to the number of bombs.

Unhampered undercover agents might have prevented that blast. But New York City special intelligence unit files had to be destroyed. A committee is screaming for the Baltimore police files. And Sen. Frank Church was told to go to hell when he asked the San Francisco police chief to send along a list of the latter's undercover agents.

Today this nation finds itself in 1984. Orwellian reportage. Love is hate. Hate is love. Aesopian language. In some circles it's a badge of honor to betray one's comrades in the Central Intelligence Agency by listing their names, stations, duties, home addresses and phone numbers. Why then was it so horrendous for anti-Communist and former Communists to list names of Communists and former comrades in Hollywood during the Korean War? That was called a blacklist. Well, what is the listing of current CIA agents? A death list.

Some 150 CIA agents, including station chiefs, have been publicized in many foreign countries, address and all. At the very least, isn't this an invasion of privacy? CIA agents aren't all spies. They can be half cloak and half dagger. Or no dagger at all.

Some are researchers, statisticians, political analysts, gladhanders. And they serve our nation well. I can recall in Caracas, the emotional embracing of one of our U.S. Embassy attaches by a VEnezuelan President. That attache may have been a CIA employee. His assignment merely was to know whom to befriend and entertain socially and intellectually. That's all. He knew where the power blocs were.

The danger isn't so much in the exposure of the agents to the KGB (of whom ther are 400,000). Nikita Khrushchev once told Jack Kennedy -- why don't we save ourselves all that counter-intelligence money, we know everything about each other, let's just tell each other.

The great danger is as much in the exposure of the nation's police and FBI, as well as CIA, intelligence infrastructure for exploitation by violence-prone neo-revolutionaries. The danger is in fingering informers, undercover operators and infiltrators to the underworld as well as to the undercover world.

And Marxists should know their Hegel better. First, thesis. Then antithesis. Then synthesis. Then – boom. Ideological battles are one thing. Hacking away at the safety of our cities and nation is another, bloodier matter.

Group protests ERA less states

WASHINGTON (AP) — The League of Women Voters says it will shift its scheduled 1978 national convention site from Illinois to Ohio, a state which has ratified the Equal Rights Amendment.

"We're putting our money where the ERA is," League President Ruth Clusen said Friday.

Illinois is one of 16 states that has not ratified the ERA, which would ban discrimination based on sex if ratified as the nation's 27th amendment.

The league is the second major women's group to shift a national convention from an unratified state. The American Association of University Women last fall decided against holding its convention in Missouri because the legislature had refused to pass the ERA.

Other groups such as the Business and Professional Women and the National Women's Political Caucus have said they will not plan activites in states that have not ratified the ERA.

"Leaders of states which do not believe that women deserve equality under the Constitution do not deserve our financial support," Mrs. Clusen said in a statement today. "Legislators in Illinois who have procrastinated in joining forces to pass ERA or who have opposed it will now have plenty of time to mull over their mistake and to reflect on the loss of revenue and poor publicity they will have as a result of their decision."

Because league conventions normally draw more than 2,000 persons, they are planned several years in advance. The 1978 session had been set for Chicago but will be switched to Cincinnati, the group said.

Eggs-tra value means nutrition!

Everyone loves the holidays but grocery bills can be alarming and usually squeeze January's food budget. As a result, most people begin menus using leftovers. Leftovers, however, need not be dried, darkened renditions of the original entree if they are used imaginately.

For instance, prepare meat- custered pie or omelet using the leftover holiday turkey or chicken. Currently both turkey and chicken are good high - protein buys averaging 60 cents per pound and eggs are always a good protein buy: A dozen large eggs weigh a minimum of 24 ounces (a pound and a half). Compare this cost- per pound with other proteinfoods such as beef, pork, poultry or fish.

According to Dr. James Nordstrom, University of Missouri extension nutrition specialist, the protein quality of eggs is so outstanding that it is used as a standard of reference in rating other food proteins. He says meat and milk proteins rank a little lower than eggs in quality, but are also of excellent value.

When buying eggs, look for the United States Department of Agriculture (SUDA) grade and the best buy. Neither egg color nor size have anything to do with quality. As a general selection guide, determine the price difference between one size and the next smaller size within the same USDA grade. If there is less than a seven cent price spread, you get more for your money by buying the larger size. USDA grade standards for eggs indicate interior quality, shell condition and appearance. Grades include U.S. Grade AA, A and B. Although there are no nutritional differences, grades AA or A eggs are ideal for poaching and frying because of their superior appearance, while grade B eggs are satisfactory for use in other cooked dishes.

When purchasing eggs, do not buy more than you can use within one week. Egg shells are porous and may lose moisture, thickening and leavening power, or may absorb off-flavors if stored too long. Eggs should be refrigerated in a covered container such as the carton in which they are purchased or in an open refrigerator compartment if they will be used within a couple of days.

Estrogens a causitive of uterine lining cancer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An almost completed study of women who take estrogens for relief of menopausal and post-menopausal afflictions shows that the female hormone may increase risks of breast cancer.

The study was disclosed Wednesday by Dr. Robert N. Hoover of the National Cancer Institute's environmental studies section. He spoke at a Senate health subcommittee hearing headed by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

Word of the research follows within weeks the publication of an earlier study that linked use of estrogens, used by an estimated five million women in the United States, to a 5-to 14- fold increase in cancer of the uterine lining.

Food and Drug Administrator Alexander M. Schmidt said the new report is "terribly important" and that his agency attempted to obtain copies but failed.

"The evidence is very strong," Schmidt told the panel, that estrogens "are causative."

A spokesman for a major estrogen manufacturer insisted that the cause - and - effect relationship has yet to be proved. Dr. C. J. Cavallito of ayerst Laboratories, producers of the hormonal drug Premarin, denied that any proof exists that directly links estrogens with any form of cancer.

Couples are negative toward rearing children

Dear Readers: A few weeks ago, a young married couple wrote to say they were undecided as to whether or not to have a family. They asked me to solicit opinions from parents of young children as well as from older couples whose families were grown. "Was it worth it?" they wanted to know. "Were the rewards enough to make up for the grief?" The question, as I put it to my readers, was this: "If you had it to do over again, would you have children?"

Well, dear friends, the responses were staggering. Much to my surprise, 70 per cent of those who responded said "NO."

Here are some excerpts from the most fascinating (and disturbing) mail I've received in a long time.

From Fargo, N.D.: My husband and I were married eight years before we had our first child. Within four years we had three. (The third one was a mistake.) Then I had my tubes tied and my husband had a vasectomy -- just to make sure. We both agree our happiest years were before we had the kids. They have brought us a lot of heartache and very little pleasure. If we had it to do over again we'd have remained childless. – Rather Die Than Sign My Name

From Tampa, Fla.: I am 40, my husband is 45. We have two children under the age of eight. I was an attractive, fulfilled career woman before I had these kids. Now I'm an exhausted, nervous wreck who misses her job and sees very little of her husband. He's got a "friend," I'm sure, and I don't blame him. Our children took all the romance out of our marriage. I'm too tired for sex, conversation or anything else. Sign me -- Too Late For Tears

From Chippewa Falls, Wis.: As the mother of six, I can tell you my life would have had no meaning without my children. Sure there are runny noses, chicken pox, arms in slings, fights, loads of laundry and sky-high grocery bills, but when I tuck them in at night, I thank God I've been so richly blessed. -- Worth The Pain

From New York: I've lived 70 years, and I speak from experience, as a mother of five. Was it worth it? No. The early years were difficult. Illness, rebellion, lack of motivation (we called it shiftlessness and laziness in our day). One was seriously disturbed – in and out of mental hospitals. Another went the Gay Lib route. Two are now living in communes (we never hear from them). Another has gone loony with the help of a phony religious leader who should be in jail. Not one of our children has given us any pleasure. God knows we did our best, but we were failures as parents and they are failures as people. – Sad Story

From Chicago: Should you have children? It depends on what you want them for. Do you want a child who will be everything you weren't? Someone whose achievements you can brag about? Do you want company in your old age? Forget it. Have children only if you can give them unselfish love and expect nothing in return. Only then will you have a fighting chance of turning out emotionally healthy individuals who will appreciate and respect you -- and themselves. -- Been There

Dear Been There: There's still hope for mankind so long as there are human beings like you around. May your tribe increase.

When buying eggs, look for the United States Department of Agriculture (SUDA) grade and the best buy. Neither egg color nor size have anything to do with quality. As a general selection guide, determine the price difference between one size and the next smaller size within the same USDA grade. If there is less than a seven cent price spread, you get more for your money by buying the larger size. USDA grade standards for eggs indicate interior quality, shell condition and appearance. Grades include U.S. Grade AA, A and B. Although there are no nutritional differences, grades AA or A eggs are ideal for poaching and frying because of their superior appearance, while grade B eggs are satisfactory for use in other cooked dishes.

When purchasing eggs, do not buy more than you can use within one week. Egg shells are porous and may lose moisture, thickening and leavening power, or may absorb off-flavors if stored too long. Eggs should be refrigerated in a covered container such as the carton in which they are purchased or in an open refrigerator compartment if they will be used within a couple of days.

Estrogens a causitive of uterine lining cancer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An almost completed study of women who take estrogens for relief of menopausal and post-menopausal afflictions shows that the female hormone may increase risks of breast cancer.

The study was disclosed Wednesday by Dr. Robert N. Hoover of the National Cancer Institute's environmental studies section. He spoke at a Senate health subcommittee hearing headed by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

Word of the research follows within weeks the publication of an earlier study that linked use of estrogens, used by an estimated five million women in the United States, to a 5-to 14- fold increase in cancer of the uterine lining.

Food and Drug Administrator Alexander M. Schmidt said the new report is "terribly important" and that his agency attempted to obtain copies but failed.

"The evidence is very strong," Schmidt told the panel, that estrogens "are causative."

A spokesman for a major estrogen manufacturer insisted that the cause - and - effect relationship has yet to be proved. Dr. C. J. Cavallito of ayerst Laboratories, producers of the hormonal drug Premarin, denied that any proof exists that directly links estrogens with any form of cancer.

Couples are negative toward rearing children

Dear Readers: A few weeks ago, a young married couple wrote to say they were undecided as to whether or not to have a family. They asked me to solicit opinions from parents of young children as well as from older couples whose families were grown. "Was it worth it?" they wanted to know. "Were the rewards enough to make up for the grief?" The question, as I put it to my readers, was this: "If you had it to do over again, would you have children?"

Well, dear friends, the responses were staggering. Much to my surprise, 70 per cent of those who responded said "NO."

Here are some excerpts from the most fascinating (and disturbing) mail I've received in a long time.

From Fargo, N.D.: My husband and I were married eight years before we had our first child. Within four years we had three. (The third one was a mistake.) Then I had my tubes tied and my husband had a vasectomy -- just to make sure. We both agree our happiest years were before we had the kids. They have brought us a lot of heartache and very little pleasure. If we had it to do over again we'd have remained childless. -- Rather Die Than Sign My Name

From Tampa, Fla.: I am 40, my husband is 45. We have two children under the age of eight. I was an attractive, fulfilled career woman before I had these kids. Now I'm an exhausted, nervous wreck who misses her job and sees very little of her husband. He's got a "friend," I'm sure, and I don't blame him. Our children took all the romance out of our marriage. I'm too tired for sex, conversation or anything else. Sign me -- Too Late For Tears

From Chippewa Falls, Wis.: As the mother of six, I can tell you my life would have had no meaning without my children. Sure there are runny noses, chicken pox, arms in slings, fights, loads of laundry and sky-high grocery bills, but when I tuck them in at night, I thank God I've been so richly blessed. -- Worth The Pain

From New York: I've lived 70 years, and I speak from experience, as a mother of five. Was it worth it? No. The early years were difficult. Illness, rebellion, lack of motivation (we called it shiftlessness and laziness in our day). One was seriously disturbed -- in and out of mental hospitals. Another went the Gay Lib route. Two are now living in communes (we never hear from them). Another has gone loony with the help of a phony religious leader who should be in jail. Not one of our children has given us any pleasure. God knows we did our best, but we were failures as parents and they are failures as people. -- Sad Story

From Chicago: Should you have children? It depends on what you want them for. Do you want a child who will be everything you weren't? Someone whose achievements you can brag about? Do you want company in your old age? Forget it. Have children only if you can give them unselfish love and expect nothing in return. Only then will you have a fighting chance of turning out emotionally healthy individuals who will appreciate and respect you -- and themselves. -- Been There

Dear Been There: There's still hope for mankind so long as there are human beings like you around. May your tribe increase.

Despite flu outbreak

Wrestlers rout Knights 46.6

By CHARLIE FRANCIS

Bulldog wrestling coach John Heacox said he was a little worried going into last night's match at thefieldhouse against Farmington. And rightly so. After all, the Sikeston squad has been affected by the flu almost to a man this week, leaving them in a greatly weakened condition. And the Knights were to provide a big challenge for the Bulldogs, having only narrowly lost to powerful Jackson. Coach Heacox has said that he would be happy if his team could just get by Farmington – then they would have a week to recuperate from their problems before their next match.

Well, the Bulldogs got by Farmington all right, walloping the Knights to the tune of 46-6 and putting on one of their most impressive performances of the season before a big crowd which turned out to watch the first home match in over a month.

Coach Heacox was all smiles after the match, which saw Bulldog wrestlers take eleven of the twelve decisions. "They (Farmington) are a better team than that," he said of the losers. "Our boys were just tremendously up for this match."

Sikeston wrestlers turned the Knights every way but loose after falling behind 6-0. Only three wrestlers - - Mark Silverthorn, David Overbey and Kevin Heuiser -- recorded pins, but most of Sikeston's decisions were by lopsided scores.

The Bulldog dominance was especially evident, in three weight classes, where the individual matchups were thought to be outstanding. Ken Hotchkiss, who is now 12-1 at 105 pounds, took on John Jones, who carried a 14-1 record into the event. Hotchkiss made it look easy, winning 10-0.

Sikeston captain Scott Hutchison and farmington's Matt Hoehn had identical records of 16-0 going into their 126- pound meeting. Like Hotchkiss, Hutchison was a 10-0 victory, remaining undefeated while dealing Hoehn his first loss.

Gaylon Couch took on 14-4 Mike Militzer in the 138- pound match, but the Sikeston won big, 12-1.

Those three matches were typical of the way the entire event was dominated by the Bulldogs.

The victory pushed the Sikestonrecord in dual matches to 8-1. Coach Heacox gave some of the credit for the success of the Bulldogs this season to the self- appointed wrestling committee, a group of girls within the Red Peppers who drum up support for the wrestling team, although the Red Peppers are not required to attend. "These girls have done just a tremendous job all year," noted the Bulldog coach, who suggested that a plug might be put in for Kay Hankins, Lesley Cox, Tammy Houchin, Ann Burlison, Terri Duncan, Laurie Harbin and Karen Walton, who along with other hard- working co-eds have put up decorations, encouraged attendance and have backed the team all the way, even following them to St. Louis.

The Bulldog junior varsity lost one the hard way, forfeiting the deciding heavyweight match and dropping a 31-27 decision. Sikeston had to forfeit two weight classes, simply because the flu outbreak left the squad without a wrestler to take the spots Sikekston won six of the ten matches that were contested.

Although the squad seems to be well on the way back to good health, Coach Heacox is giving the team the rest of the week off before they go back to work next Monday in preparation for the Ste. Genevieve match. "Three days is plenty of time to get ready for a match," he said, referring to Thursday night's encounter at the fieldhouse. Then comes the Semo Conference Wrestling Tournament Saturday afternoon and evening at the mini-dome. It'll be Sikeston's chance to prove once and for all that they have the toughest squad in the conference, and it will also be a chance for Jackson to even the score against the dogs after the 27-22 loss January 8. First-round matches will get underway at 12:30 p.m. Saturday. Semifinals are expected to start at about 2:30, while the consolation and championship rounds are scheduled for 500.

Hawks re-sign Wilburn Holland

ATLANTA (AP) — Wilbur Holland, a rookie guard from New Orleans who was placed on waivers by the Atlanta Hawks nearly two months ago, has been re-signed by the National Basketball Association club. The Hawks had waived Holland Nov. 27 and carried only 11 players on their roster until Thursday's announcement.

Robin Roberts, former pitching ace of the Philadelphia Phillies, has been elected to baseball's Hall of Fame, it was announced Thursday morning. In addition, Bob Lemon, winner of 207 games during his pitching career in the 1950's, also achieved admission to the shrine. (AP Wirephoto)

Lemon, Roberts voted to Hall

NEW YORK (AP) — It would be nice to report that Bob Lemon had lived out a boyhood dream when he was elected along with Robin Roberts to the baseball Hall of Fame.

But it's just not so. The truth of the matter is that baseball occupied a back seat with Lemon when he was growing up in San Bernardino, Calif.

"I wanted to run a gas station,' said Lemon, who instead won 207 games in a 13 seasons with the Cleveland Indians. "What's wrong with a gas station?" he asked. "Where do you go every day? It beats a bar. After I'm through with baseball, I think I'll go back to pumping gas."

Baseball, however, isn't quite through with Lemon and Roberts. The two pitchers have an Aug. 9 date in Cooperstown, N.Y. where they will be inducted into the Hall of Fame.

Both were elected easily in balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America. With 388 ballots returned, 75 per cent or 291 votes were required for election. Roberts received 337 and Lemon 305. The late Gil Hodges was third with 233 votes, 58 short of election.

Between them, Roberts and Lemon won nearly 500 major league games and enjoyed 13 seasons in which they won 20 or more games. Roberts, pitching for the Philadelphia Phillies, Baltimore Orioles, Houston Astros and Chicago Cubs won 286 games in 19 seasons and had six straight 20-victory seasons. Lemon had 207 victories including a stretch of seven 20-win seasons in nine years, all with the Cleveland Indians.

Both pitchers nearly made it last year. Roberts fell nine votes short and Lemon was 39 away when the writers elected slugger Ralph Kiner to Cooperstown.

OTHER RECEIVING VOTES: Notre Dame, Twin Rivers, Woodland.

Fresh from victories over Sikeston and Lilbourn in their past two ballgames, the Charleston Bluejays were solid picks as the area's number one cage team in this week's Daily Standard coaches poll.

The Bluejays collected five first place votes out of seven ballots cast this week. Scott Central and Sikeston each received one first place ballot and finished second and third, respectively. Charleston's total of 101 points was 29 ahead of the Braves total.

Charleston, which was also named number one last week in a narrow vote, became the first number one squad this season to break the first place hex by beating Sikeston. Each other number one team has lost its next game after being voted the honor.

Rounding out this week's top ten were Lilbourn, Kennett, Kelly, Neelyville, Senath-Hornersville, Dexter, and Advance and North Pemiscot, who tied for tenth.

Panel's Picks

The sports staff here at the Daily Standard didn't make predictions for the games last Friday night and last Tuesday evening for one reason or another (actually, we got lazy), but Dale Forbis, Bill Harrison and Charlie Francis are ready to look into the future again and give you our humble opinions of how tonight's games will turn out.

Although tonight's slate is not a large one, the schedule of games is one of the most challenging we've tackled this season, at least for predictions. The panel has agreed on eight of the eleven ballgames on the schedule, but we are quick to admit that even the ones which were unanimous choices could go either way.

Kennett is the favorite to beat Poplar Bluff, although the Indians' poor showing Tuesday night against Senath- Hornersville and the Mules' home court advantage prompted Bill Harrison to pick them as upset winners. Dale Forbis chose Cooter over Caruthersville and Leopold over Bell City in the only other disputed contests.

The trio agrees that Senath- Hornersville will handle Hayti. Both squads were upset winners Tuesday night. In two other ballgames which should be good ones, Sikeston should take Lilbourn and Advance should beat Richland.

Hawks re-sign Wilburn Holland

ATLANTA (AP) — Wilbur Holland, a rookie guard from New Orleans who was placed on waivers by the Atlanta Hawks nearly two months ago, has been re-signed by the National Basketball Association club. The Hawks had waived Holland Nov. 27 and carried only 11 players on their roster until Thursday's announcement.

Robin Roberts, former pitching ace of the Philadelphia Phillies, has been elected to baseball's Hall of Fame, it was announced Thursday morning. In addition, Bob Lemon, winner of 207 games during his pitching career in the 1950's, also achieved admission to the shrine. (AP Wirephoto)

Lemon, Roberts voted to Hall

NEW YORK (AP) — It would be nice to report that Bob Lemon had lived out a boyhood dream when he was elected along with Robin Roberts to the baseball Hall of Fame.

But it's just not so. The truth of the matter is that baseball occupied a back seat with Lemon when he was growing up in San Bernardino, Calif.

"I wanted to run a gas station,' said Lemon, who instead won 207 games in a 13 seasons with the Cleveland Indians. "What's wrong with a gas station?" he asked. "Where do you go every day? It beats a bar. After I'm through with baseball, I think I'll go back to pumping gas."

Baseball, however, isn't quite through with Lemon and Roberts. The two pitchers have an Aug. 9 date in Cooperstown, N.Y. where they will be inducted into the Hall of Fame.

Both were elected easily in balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America. With 388 ballots returned, 75 per cent or 291 votes were required for election. Roberts received 337 and Lemon 305. The late Gil Hodges was third with 233 votes, 58 short of election.

Between them, Roberts and Lemon won nearly 500 major league games and enjoyed 13 seasons in which they won 20 or more games. Roberts, pitching for the Philadelphia Phillies, Baltimore Orioles, Houston Astros and Chicago Cubs won 286 games in 19 seasons and had six straight 20-victory seasons. Lemon had 207 victories including a stretch of seven 20-win seasons in nine years, all with the Cleveland Indians.

Both pitchers nearly made it last year. Roberts fell nine votes short and Lemon was 39 away when the writers elected slugger Ralph Kiner to Cooperstown.

OTHER RECEIVING VOTES: Notre Dame, Twin Rivers, Woodland.

Fresh from victories over Sikeston and Lilbourn in their past two ballgames, the Charleston Bluejays were solid picks as the area's number one cage team in this week's Daily Standard coaches poll.

The Bluejays collected five first place votes out of seven ballots cast this week. Scott Central and Sikeston each received one first place ballot and finished second and third, respectively. Charleston's total of 101 points was 29 ahead of the Braves total.

Charleston, which was also named number one last week in a narrow vote, became the first number one squad this season to break the first place hex by beating Sikeston. Each other number one team has lost its next game after being voted the honor.

Rounding out this week's top ten were Lilbourn, Kennett, Kelly, Neelyville, Senath-Hornersville, Dexter, and Advance and North Pemiscot, who tied for tenth.

Panel's Picks

The sports staff here at the Daily Standard didn't make predictions for the games last Friday night and last Tuesday evening for one reason or another (actually, we got lazy), but Dale Forbis, Bill Harrison and Charlie Francis are ready to look into the future again and give you our humble opinions of how tonight's games will turn out.

Although tonight's slate is not a large one, the schedule of games is one of the most challenging we've tackled this season, at least for predictions. The panel has agreed on eight of the eleven ballgames on the schedule, but we are quick to admit that even the ones which were unanimous choices could go either way.

Kennett is the favorite to beat Poplar Bluff, although the Indians' poor showing Tuesday night against Senath- Hornersville and the Mules' home court advantage prompted Bill Harrison to pick them as upset winners. Dale Forbis chose Cooter over Caruthersville and Leopold over Bell City in the only other disputed contests.

The trio agrees that Senath- Hornersville will handle Hayti. Both squads were upset winners Tuesday night. In two other ballgames which should be good ones, Sikeston should take Lilbourn and Advance should beat Richland.

Panthers try to put it together

By DALE FORBIS

Repeating a state championship is a hard thing to do. But, with luck willing, the Lilbourn Panthers will shoot for their third state title in a row this coming March. That is an impressive record and not just wild talk. There is much talent at Lilbourn this year, attested to by a number one-ranking among the state's 2-A schools. However, all is not roses at the New Madrid county school. A 57-56 loss to Charleston last Tuesday gave the Panthers two losing efforts in a row.

"We played pretty well against Charleston," was Panther coach Bob Phelps' assessment, "We had good defense, but I did think we'd score a little more."

"It was much better-played, by us, than that game against Scott Central."

Nobody can accuse the Panthers of loading up their schedule with easy marks to pave their way to Columbia. Scott Central, who surprised Lilbourn by 20 points a week ago, is ranked among the state's elite in 1-A and Charleston is one of Missouri's top ten 3-A squads. Next is Sikeston. And, where are they? You got it. The Bulldogs are the 6th-rated 4-A school in the state.

Phelps' comment on the Bulldogs is the same as every other opposing coach.

"We just hope we can stay with those big guys," says the Lilbourn coach, "But, I'm sure it'll be a good game."

"Each time out we correct something else in our game. We keep getting better."

Better? Lilbourn entered the season with a winning streak over 40 games and ran the count to 47 before it snapped. But, there have been problems. The Panthers have talent. But, maybe too much talent. The old cliche, "The team needs three balls to be happy," might apply. Phelps is finding coaching a bit harder this season despite the presence of numerous talented individuals because "individuals" is the key word. Talking the team members into playing as a team has been the trick, but the Lilbourn coach now thinks his squad is ready to play ball.

"We're playing together much better now," was his comment about the game with Charleston.

And, everyone knows that there is plenty of talent at Lilbourn. Sometimes a high school coach's hardest job is convincing players that not everyone can have the ball at the same time. With players possessing talent like two time All-Stater Frankie Robinson and All-District choice Don Treadwell, combined with talented first year starter Jimmie Baker, it appears that someday the parts of the machine will mold and Panther Power will reign again.

Sikeston folks just hope it doesn't begin at the SHS fieldhouse Friday night.

The Bulldogs played an inspired game last Tuesday against the Meridian Bobcats, dedicating the effort to injured teammate Ed Nunnelee. It was a game that evoked pride among Bulldog followers, with all players giving more than 100 percent against a very strong foe, perhaps the strongest opponent of the season. Now they are called on to duplicate the feat against a defending state champ.

They need good support for the effort and earned it with their play on the other side of the river. A crowd like the one at Charleston's game would be appreciated...and appropriate.

Kelly stops I-SC, will meet Braves in Scott-Mississippi finals

By BILL HARRISON

CHAFFEE---Second seeded Kelly topped Illmo-Scott City in the varsity bracket here Thursday night 65-53 and second seeded Scott Central thumped Kelly 62-37 in junior varsity action in the semi-finals of the Scott-Mississippi conference tournament.

The Scott City Rams, who were seeded third in the tourney, used a 2-1-2 zone defense in the game against the Hawks. Kelly had some shooting problems from the outside but the Rams had more trouble finding the hole in the basket and after a close three quarters the Hawks built up a ten point advantage early in the fourth period which I-SC wasn't able to cut into.

Coach Lanpher kept shuttling players in and out in the first half trying to find the right combination as the zone defense kept Kelly's shooting off The Rams shooting was cold from inside and outside except for Steve Hanschen, who kept the Rams close through the first half.

Kelly built up a 10 point lead in the second period but I-SC ran off seven unanswered points to get to within three. The Rams couldn't stop Randy Hagar and Art Romanowski and Kelly was able to build the lead back up to 35-26 at the half.

Kelly came out in the third period and played even with the Rams through the first half of the quarter. Steve Hanschen hit a 30-foot shot at the buzzer to pull the Rams to within six 47-41 at the start of the fourth period, but Kelly's rebounding enabled them to come away with the victory and advance into the finals Saturday night.

Hanschen ended the game with 26 points and Art Romanowski scored 22 for Kelly.

In the JV game, the SCCHS Braves took advantage of the absence of David Felter and walked over the Hawks. Felter was promoted to the varsity squad this week. Scott Central led 23-21 at the half but outscored the Hawks 39-16 in the last two periods.

Saturday night the Scott Central Braves take on the top seeded I-SC Rams in the JV game for the championship and Kelly and Scott Central battle for the championship.

It has been a long time since there has been a team in the finals of the tournament other than Kelly and Scott Central. Maybe Gene Bess, now coach at Three Rivers JC would know when but to most people for the last few years it has been these two teams.

Kelly is the defending champion and has won the tournament for the past two years.

This year the Braves have already defeated the Hawks twice, once for the Oran tournament title and in the semi-finals of the University High Christmas tournament in overtime.

Emotionalism plays a big part in the games the two teams play as they are big rivals. Each team would like to beat the other for prestigious reasons. Last year Kelly took the edge in games 2-1 but the Braves have the edge so far with another to play in the conference after Saturday night.

Over the past four years the two teams have battled on fairly even terms and given the fans of the area some exciting basketball.

This year the Braves are the second ranked class 1A team in the state and have the most explosive offense in the area with their speed and quickness. Kelly is ranked fourth in 2A. The Braves have two of the top rebounders around in Ricky Thomas and Otto Porter. The two can score from inside but Porter is a threat from anywhere within 20-feet. At guard the Braves have probably the most underated player in the area in James Williams. Williams is an excellent shooter from the freethrow circle on in and as good a ball handler as there is in Southeast Missouri.

Kelly has Randy Hagar for board strength and inside shooting. Coach Nick Lanpher likes to use seven or eight players in a game and has added David Felter to the lineup for added scoring and rebounding.

The game will start at 8:30 Saturday night following the championship of the JV bracket between Scott Central and Illmo-Scott City at 7:00.

Players decide not to strike Pro Bowl game

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A boycott of the Pro Bowl would have stung the wrong people, so about 50 National Football League stars decided not to take a strike vote, said players' union representatives.

The threat of a player boycott of Monday night's game hung over pregame preparations all week, and the uncertain status of the game was blamed for sagging ticket sales.

"It boiled down to a question of who would be hurt if the game were cancelled, and a question of whether a cancellation would have had enough impact on the owners," said NFL Players Association Executive Director Ed Garvey.

In a 90-minute closed meeting, the players decided management would ntt have been hurt by a boycott, but football fans would have been, Garvey said. About 30 members of the all-star squads did not attend the meeting.

"After a prolonged discussion of the situation, we decided it was in our best interests not even to vote on whether there would be a strike," said union President Kermit Alexander.

He denied that the decision to avoid a strike vote could be considered a setback for the asociaion.

The NFL owners' refusal to pay anything into the players' pension fund for the past two years prompted the boycott talk, Garvey said. But he said several other issues were discussed.

Elvin Bethea, Houston Oilers defensive end, said he felt that the lack of a contract could permit owners to cancel hospitalization and other benefits if they should decide to do so.

Panthers try to put it together

By DALE FORBIS

Repeating a state championship is a hard thing to do. But, with luck willing, the Lilbourn Panthers will shoot for their third state title in a row this coming March. That is an impressive record and not just wild talk. There is much talent at Lilbourn this year, attested to by a number one-ranking among the state's 2-A schools. However, all is not roses at the New Madrid county school. A 57-56 loss to Charleston last Tuesday gave the Panthers two losing efforts in a row.

"We played pretty well against Charleston," was Panther coach Bob Phelps' assessment, "We had good defense, but I did think we'd score a little more."

"It was much better-played, by us, than that game against Scott Central."

Nobody can accuse the Panthers of loading up their schedule with easy marks to pave their way to Columbia. Scott Central, who surprised Lilbourn by 20 points a week ago, is ranked among the state's elite in 1-A and Charleston is one of Missouri's top ten 3-A squads. Next is Sikeston. And, where are they? You got it. The Bulldogs are the 6th-rated 4-A school in the state.

Phelps' comment on the Bulldogs is the same as every other opposing coach.

"We just hope we can stay with those big guys," says the Lilbourn coach, "But, I'm sure it'll be a good game."

"Each time out we correct something else in our game. We keep getting better."

Better? Lilbourn entered the season with a winning streak over 40 games and ran the count to 47 before it snapped. But, there have been problems. The Panthers have talent. But, maybe too much talent. The old cliche, "The team needs three balls to be happy," might apply. Phelps is finding coaching a bit harder this season despite the presence of numerous talented individuals because "individuals" is the key word. Talking the team members into playing as a team has been the trick, but the Lilbourn coach now thinks his squad is ready to play ball.

"We're playing together much better now," was his comment about the game with Charleston.

And, everyone knows that there is plenty of talent at Lilbourn. Sometimes a high school coach's hardest job is convincing players that not everyone can have the ball at the same time. With players possessing talent like two time All-Stater Frankie Robinson and All-District choice Don Treadwell, combined with talented first year starter Jimmie Baker, it appears that someday the parts of the machine will mold and Panther Power will reign again.

Sikeston folks just hope it doesn't begin at the SHS fieldhouse Friday night.

The Bulldogs played an inspired game last Tuesday against the Meridian Bobcats, dedicating the effort to injured teammate Ed Nunnelee. It was a game that evoked pride among Bulldog followers, with all players giving more than 100 percent against a very strong foe, perhaps the strongest opponent of the season. Now they are called on to duplicate the feat against a defending state champ.

They need good support for the effort and earned it with their play on the other side of the river. A crowd like the one at Charleston's game would be appreciated...and appropriate.

Kelly stops I-SC, will meet Braves in Scott-Mississippi finals

By BILL HARRISON

CHAFFEE—Second seeded Kelly topped Illmo-Scott City in the varsity bracket here Thursday night 65-53 and second seeded Scott Central thumped Kelly 62-37 in junior varsity action in the semi-finals of the Scott-Mississippi conference tournament.

The Scott City Rams, who were seeded third in the tourney, used a 2-1-2 zone defense in the game against the Hawks. Kelly had some shooting problems from the outside but the Rams had more trouble finding the hole in the basket and after a close three quarters the Hawks built up a ten point advantage early in the fourth period which I-SC wasn't able to cut into.

Coach Lanpher kept shuttling players in and out in the first half trying to find the right combination as the zone defense kept Kelly's shooting off The Rams shooting was cold from inside and outside except for Steve Hanschen, who kept the Rams close through the first half.

Kelly built up a 10 point lead in the second period but I-SC ran off seven unanswered points to get to within three. The Rams couldn't stop Randy Hagar and Art Romanowski and Kelly was able to build the lead back up to 35-26 at the half.

Kelly came out in the third period and played even with the Rams through the first half of the quarter. Steve Hanschen hit a 30-foot shot at the buzzer to pull the Rams to within six 47-41 at the start of the fourth period, but Kelly's rebounding enabled them to come away with the victory and advance into the finals Saturday night.

Hanschen ended the game with 26 points and Art Romanowski scored 22 for Kelly.

In the JV game, the SCCHS Braves took advantage of the absence of David Felter and walked over the Hawks. Felter was promoted to the varsity squad this week. Scott Central led 23-21 at the half but outscored the Hawks 39-16 in the last two periods.

Saturday night the Scott Central Braves take on the top seeded I-SC Rams in the JV game for the championship and Kelly and Scott Central battle for the championship.

It has been a long time since there has been a team in the finals of the tournament other than Kelly and Scott Central. Maybe Gene Bess, now coach at Three Rivers JC would know when but to most people for the last few years it has been these two teams.

Kelly is the defending champion and has won the tournament for the past two years.

This year the Braves have already defeated the Hawks twice, once for the Oran tournament title and in the semi-finals of the University High Christmas tournament in overtime.

Emotionalism plays a big part in the games the two teams play as they are big rivals. Each team would like to beat the other for prestigious reasons. Last year Kelly took the edge in games 2-1 but the Braves have the edge so far with another to play in the conference after Saturday night.

Over the past four years the two teams have battled on fairly even terms and given the fans of the area some exciting basketball.

This year the Braves are the second ranked class 1A team in the state and have the most explosive offense in the area with their speed and quickness. Kelly is ranked fourth in 2A. The Braves have two of the top rebounders around in Ricky Thomas and Otto Porter. The two can score from inside but Porter is a threat from anywhere within 20-feet. At guard the Braves have probably the most underated player in the area in James Williams. Williams is an excellent shooter from the freethrow circle on in and as good a ball handler as there is in Southeast Missouri.

Kelly has Randy Hagar for board strength and inside shooting. Coach Nick Lanpher likes to use seven or eight players in a game and has added David Felter to the lineup for added scoring and rebounding.

The game will start at 8:30 Saturday night following the championship of the JV bracket between Scott Central and Illmo-Scott City at 7:00.

Players decide not to strike Pro Bowl game

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A boycott of the Pro Bowl would have stung the wrong people, so about 50 National Football League stars decided not to take a strike vote, said players' union representatives.

The threat of a player boycott of Monday night's game hung over pregame preparations all week, and the uncertain status of the game was blamed for sagging ticket sales.

"It boiled down to a question of who would be hurt if the game were cancelled, and a question of whether a cancellation would have had enough impact on the owners," said NFL Players Association Executive Director Ed Garvey.

In a 90-minute closed meeting, the players decided management would ntt have been hurt by a boycott, but football fans would have been, Garvey said. About 30 members of the all-star squads did not attend the meeting.

"After a prolonged discussion of the situation, we decided it was in our best interests not even to vote on whether there would be a strike," said union President Kermit Alexander.

He denied that the decision to avoid a strike vote could be considered a setback for the associaion.

The NFL owners' refusal to pay anything into the players' pension fund for the past two years prompted the boycott talk, Garvey said. But he said several other issues were discussed.

Elvin Bethea, Houston Oilers defensive end, said he felt that the lack of a contract could permit owners to cancel hospitalization and other benefits if they should decide to do so.

1,100 Jehovah's Witnesses turn out for conference

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Approximately 1,100 Jehovah's Witnesses assembled Sunday at the Arena Building heard the discourse, "How the Kingdom of God Affects You," delivered by Jack E. Roberts, a traveling representative of the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, Inc.

"Rulership by God is far from the minds of most people," Roberts said. "Even religious people have long prayed for God's Kingdom to come and for God's will to be done on earth as it is in heaven. But do they know what they are praying for?"

Describing God's Kingdom as a heavenly administrative rule over the earth, he said, "First, Almight God will have to remove all of man's rule from the earth. This will soon be realized in this our generation.

"The activity of God's Kingdom touches the lies of those who have come to know God. Those who have not come to know what they worship do not know what God's Kingdom means and what God's Kingdom will do for them individually," Roberts further stated.

The Witnesses, who are now found in 210 countries and islands, say God's Kingdom is the central theme of their message. This, they say, is the only solution for the ills of the entire human family which have culminated in the 20th century. However, Jehovah's Witnesses feel that even now, amidst social stigmas, racial hatreds and violent strife, they can practice true brotherhood of man and love of neighbor as the Bible advocates.

Observers of the convention found people of various nationalities and races working together to man the different departments in order to operate the convention effectively. As early as Friday eveniing, teams of workers arrived to decorate the stage, wire the building for sound and set up chairs, as well as deliver the equipment necessary for preparation of their meals.

On Sunday morning, 27 persons were baptized after completing a careful study of the Bible.

The Witnesses are making preparations for even larger conventions this summer in over 50 cities and towns in the WUnited States and Canada.

Int he meantime, regular meetings of Jehovah's Witnesses will resume this week at the local Kingdom SHalls.

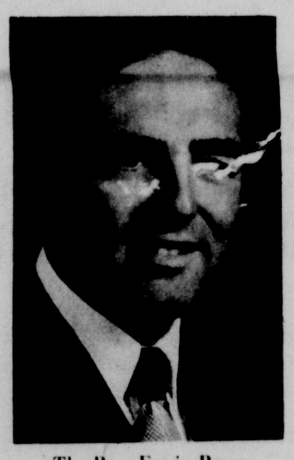
Concordia names temporary pastor

The Rev. Erwin A. Brese has been chosen to serve as vacancy pastor of Concordia Lutheran Church, located at the corner of Park Avenue and East Wakefield Street.

Currently the director of Lutheran Family and Children's Services of Southeast Missouri, with offices in Cape Girardeau, the Rev. Mr. Brese, will serve as a temporary replacement for the Rev. Herold Lohrmann, who accepted a call to serve the Lutheran congregation in Shobonier, Ill.

While the congregation is in the process of calling a resident pastor under the guidance of the Rev. Lester Kuker of Poplar Bluff, the Rev. Mr. Brese will carry on the pastoral ministry on a part-time basis.

In addition to leading worship on Sundays, he will teach confirmation classes and visit the sick and shut-ins of both the Concordia and Matthews Christ Lutheran Church congregations. Sunday services are aired weekly on radio station KMPL from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m.



The Rev. Erwin Brese

During the week, the Rev. Mr. Brese administers a program of counseling for individuals and families and teaches courses on family living in his capacity as Lutheran Family and Children's Services director.

Christ Gospel Church to be revival host

Revival services next week at Christ Gospel Church, 717 Kendall St., will be conducted by Evangelist Jerry Phelps, a noted gospel steel guitarist from Jeffersonville, Ind.

The services will begin at 7:30 each evening Monday through Friday, according to the Rev. James Beaird, pastor, who said special singing and prayer for the sick will also be featured.

First Assembly revival continues

First Assembly of God Church, 306 S. Kingshighway, is in the third week of a full gospel crusade featuring international Evangelist Mohammed Alli of Guyana, South America. The nightly meetings began Jan. 4 and are still going strong, according to the Rev. Loren Wooten, pastor, who said the services start 7 o' clock on all week nights exept Saturday and at 9:30 a.m. and 6 p.m. on Sundays.

The Rev. Mr. Alli preaches that if God said it, He meant it and it is so ... then prays according to that confession of trust.

The evangelist bears witness of many miracles and healings that the Lord has done, including twice raising the dead — one of whom was his wife, who hemorrhaged for five weeks following a miscarriage in Guyana and revived after beind dead for six hours.

Mrs. Alli shared her personal testimony during the service last Sunday night and will return with their two children, Esther and Samuel, this weekend to be in both services Sunday.

New film slated for youth meeting

A new film, "In the Presence of Mine Enemies," the compelling story of ex-prisoner of war, Capt. Howard E. Rutledge, will be shown at 7:30 p.m. Saturday during the Charleston Baptist Association's monthly Youth for Christ meeting at First Baptist Church, 1101 N. Main St.

Capt. Rutledge, who became a prisoner of the North Vietnamese on Nov. 27, 1965, when his fighter plane was downed by heavy anti-aircraft fire, a "drop-out" Christian layman, rediscovered the necessity of faith in Christ while suffering torture and deprivation in the "Hanoi Hilton." He describes the terrible years of loneliness, of waiting, of hoping and the miracle-by-miracle workings of God in the notorious prison camp.

This is also the story of Capt. Rutledge's wife, Phyllis, and the seven-year nightmare which began for her on Nov. 28, 1965, when she heard the awful news that her husband was missing in action. For five years Phyllis Rutledge faced life not knowing if her husband was alive or dead. She shares her doubts, fears and questions through the death of her mother and the tragic diving accident that left their teen-aged son completely paralyzed.

Then one unforgettable day a letter came from Capt. Rutledge, and with a deep sense of relief and gratitude, she began waiting for his return.

The personal story of Howard and Phyllis Rutledge was filmed to share the discovery that faith in Christ really does make a difference.

Counseling service leaders are honored

The administrator and directors of the new Tri-County Counseling Service were honored Sunday at First United Methodist Church, Highway 61 North, as the congregation observed Mental Health Sunday.

Administrator Ron Steinmetz and directors of the counseling service were present and received special recognition during the service, as Pat Jones, church lay leader Linda Steward and Dr. Arthur C. Fulbright, pastor, spoke on the merits of the new counseling program and its potential benefit to the area.

Also, the congregation contributed more than $500 in a free will offering taken during the service to promote the development of the program.

THE BIBLE

No. 223. Psalm 121

Psalm 121 is, of course, one of the most popular and frequently-quoted passages of scriptures in the entire Bible. Few writers have managed to capture such comfort and serenity in so few words. The simplicity of the language and cadences coincides beautifully with the majesty of the thought to give this hymn its unusually moving effect.

"I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the Lord, which made heaven and earth. He will not suffer thy foot to be moved: he that keepeth thee will not slumber. Behold, he that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep." (Psalms 121:1-4)

"The Lord is thy keeper; the Lord is thy shade upon thy right hand. The sun shall not smite thee by day, nor the moon by night. The Lord shall preserve thee from all evil: he shall preserve thy soul. The Lord shall preserve thy going out, and thy coming in, from this time forth, and even for evermore." (Psalms 121:5-8)

Reservations for the luncheon with the bishop at the Wesley church are being accepted by Mrs. Fred Steward Jr., lay leader of First United Methodist Church.

Chaffee church plans revival

CHAFFEE — The Chaffee Church of God of Prophecy, located at the corner of Third and Wright streets, will host revival beginning Tuesday evening and continuing through Feb. 1.

Evangelist Missionary Jack Cates will preach each evening at 7:30, and the featured singers will be the gospel Merrymakers of Cape Girardeau.

The Rev. Mr. Cates, who has been a missionary to the remote, mountainous area of Jamaica for the past 17 years is now a state evangelist for the Missouri Churches of God of Prophecy.

After becoming a member of the Chaffee church last July and being appointed to the office by State Overseer Bishop A. J. Creel, he has conducted revivals extensively throughout the state.

Along with preaching each evening, the Rev. Mr. Cates will relate some of his experiences in missionary work.

1,100 Jehovah's Witnesses turn out for conference

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Approximately 1,100 Jehovah's Witnesses assembled Sunday at the Arena Building heard the discourse, "How the Kingdom of God Affects You," delivered by Jack E. Roberts, a traveling representative of the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, Inc.

"Rulership by God is far from the minds of most people," Roberts said. "Even religious people have long prayed for God's Kingdom to come and for God's will to be done on earth as it is in heaven. But do they know what they are praying for?"

Describing God's Kingdom as a heavenly administrative rule over the earth, he said, "First, Almight God will have to remove all of man's rule from the earth. This will soon be realized in this our generation.

"The activity of God's Kingdom touches the lies of those who have come to know God. Those who have not come to know what they worship do not know what God's Kingdom means and what God's Kingdom will do for them individually," Roberts further stated.

The Witnesses, who are now found in 210 countries and islands, say God's Kingdom is the central theme of their message. This, they say, is the only solution for the ills of the entire human family which have culminated in the 20th century. However, Jehovah's Witnesses feel that even now, amidst social stigmas, racial hatreds and violent strife, they can practice true brotherhood of man and love of neighbor as the Bible advocates.

Observers of the convention found people of various nationalities and races working together to man the different departments in order to operate the convention effectively. As early as Friday eveniing, teams of workers arrived to decorate the stage, wire the building for sound and set up chairs, as well as deliver the equipment necessary for preparation of their meals.

On Sunday morning, 27 persons were baptized after completing a careful study of the Bible.

The Witnesses are making preparations for even larger conventions this summer in over 50 cities and towns in the WUnited States and Canada.

Int he meantime, regular meetings of Jehovah's Witnesses will resume this week at the local Kingdom SHalls.

First Assembly revival continues

First Assembly of God Church, 306 S. Kingshighway, is in the third week of a full gosepl crusade featuring international Evangelist Mohammed Alli of Guyana, South America. Loren Wooten, pastor, who said the services start 7 o' clock on all week nights exept Saturday and at 9:30 a.m. and 6 p.m. on Sundays.

The Rev. Mr. Alli preaches that if God said it, He meant it and it is so ... then prays according to that confession of trust.

The evangelist bears witness of many miracles and healings that the Lord has done, including twice raising the dead — one of whom was his wife, who hemorrhaged for five weeks following a miscarriage in Guyana and revived after beind dead for six hours.

Mrs. Alli shared her personal testimony during the service last Sunday night and will return with their two children, Esther and Samuel, this weekend to be in both services Sunday.

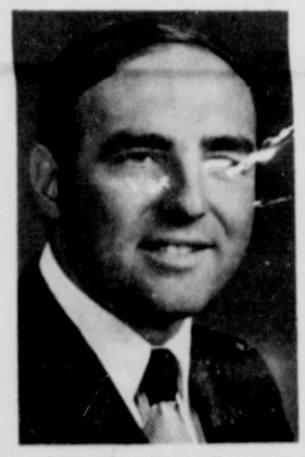
Concordia names temporary pastor

The Rev. Erwin A. Brese has been chosen to serve as vacancy pastor of Concordia Lutheran Church, located at the corner of Park Avenue and East Wakefield Street.

Currently the director of Lutheran Family and Children's Services of Southeast Missouri, with offices in Cape Girardeau, the Rev. Mr. Brese, will serve as a temporary replacement for the Rev. Herold Lohrmann, who accepted a call to serve the Lutheran congregation in Shobonier, Ill.

While the congregation is in the process of calling a resident pastor under the guidance of the Rev. Lester Kuker of Poplar Bluff, the Rev. Mr. Brese will carry on the pastoral ministry on a part-time basis.

In addition to leading worship on Sundays, he will teach confirmation classes and visit the sick and shut-ins of both the Concordia and Matthews Christ Lutheran Church congregations. Sunday services are aired weekly on radio station KMPL from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m.



The Rev. Erwin Brese

During the week, the Rev. Mr. Brese administers a program of counseling for individuals and families and teaches courses on family living in his capacity as Lutheran Family and Children's Services director.

Christ Gospel Church to be revival host

Revival services next week at Christ Gospel Church, 717 Kendall St., will be conducted by Evangelist Jerry Phelps, a noted gospel steel guitarist from Jeffersonville, Ind.

The services will begin at 7:30 each evening Monday through Friday, according to the Rev. James Beaird, pastor, who said special singing and prayer for the sick will also be featured.

New film slated for youth meeting

A new film, "In the Presence of Mine Enemies," the compelling story of ex-prisoner of war, Capt. Howard E. Rutledge, will be shown at 7:30 p.m. Saturday during the Charleston Baptist Association's monthly Youth for Christ meeting at First Baptist Church, 1101 N. Main St.

Capt. Rutledge, who became a prisoner of the North Vietnamese on Nov. 27, 1965, when his fighter plane was downed by heavy anti-aircraft fire, a "drop-out" Christian layman, rediscovered the necessity of faith in Christ while suffering torture and deprivation in the "Hanoi Hilton." He describes the terrible years of loneliness, of waiting, of hoping and the miracle-by-miracle workings of God in the notorious prison camp.

This is also the story of Capt. Rutledge's wife, Phyllis, and the seven-year nightmare which began for her on Nov. 28, 1965, when she heard the awful news that her husband was missing in action. For five years Phyllis Rutledge faced life not knowing if her husband was alive or dead. She shares her doubts, fears and questions through the death of her mother and the tragic diving accident that left their teen-aged son completely paralyzed.

Then one unforgettable day a letter came from Capt. Rutledge, and with a deep sense of relief and gratitude, she began waiting for his return.

The personal story of Howard and Phyllis Rutledge was filmed to share the discovery that faith in Christ really does make a difference.

Counseling service leaders are honored

The administrator and directors of the new Tri-County Counseling Service were honored Sunday at First United Methodist Church, Highway 61 North, as the congregation observed Mental Health Sunday.

Administrator Ron Steinmetz and directors of the counseling service were present and received special recognition during the service, as Pat Jones, church lay leader Linda Steward and Dr. Arthur C. Fulbright, pastor, spoke on the merits of the new counseling program and its potential benefit to the area.

Also, the congregation contributed more than $500 in a free will offering taken during the service to promote the development of the program.

Group to sing Sunday

CANALOU — The United Sound of Paragould, Ark., will sing during the 10:45 a.m. service and again in a 1:30 p.m. gospel singing program Sunday at First Baptist Church, according to the Rev. Fred Ritter, pastor.

Also, lunch will be served in the church dining hall between the two services.

Chili supper planned

COMMERCE — The United Methodist Men of the Commerce United Methodist Church will sponsor a chili supper at the church on Jan. 30. Serving will begin at 5:30 p.m., and tickets may be purchased at the door.

THE BIBLE

No. 223. Psalm 121

Psalm 121 is, of course, one of the most popular and frequently-quoted passage of scriptures in the entire Bible. Few writers have managed to capture such comfort an serenity in so few words. The simplicity of the language and cadences coincides beaut fully with the majesty of the thought to give this hymn its unusually moving effect.

"I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help. My help comet from the Lord, which made heaven and earth. He will not suffer thy foot to be move he that keepeth thee will not slumber. Behold, he that keepeth Israel shall neith slumber nor sleep." (Psalms 121:1-4)

"The Lord is thy keeper; the Lord is thy shade upon thy right hand. The sun shall n smite thee by day, nor the moon by night. The Lord shall preserve thee from all ev he shall preserve thy soul. The Lord shall preserve thy going out, and thy coming i from this time forth, and even for evermore." (Psalms 121:5-8)

People Again Dance Gentle One-Two-Three

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Dancing to rock music is getting a twirl for its money from folks trying the waltz again.

Dance school managers in this area say people of all ages are returning to ballroom dancing but the greatest increase is among students in their late teens and early 20s.

At Yale about 30 students have added fox trot lessons to their curriculums. The weekly classes are taught by two students, Rosanne Pollack and Leonard Sperling.

"I think that people are tired of inventing their own things and jumping around and shaking their bodies all over the place," says Miss Pollack.

"Ballroom dancing offers some structure, but yet you can improvise on your own. And it gives you a chance to dance with your partner."

Dancing cheek-to-cheek, instead of across the room from each other, has achieved a degree of popularity at the University of Connecticut where a ballroom dancing club was organized last year by chemical engineering professor Richard Stephenson and a professional dance instructor friend.

One dance school manager says some people find the singles ballroom a better place to meet than a singles bar room. That, plus the nostalgia kick and tough economic times contribute to growing popularity of ballroom hoofing, the manager says.

The manager says older couples whose blue-chip stocks have dipped 10 points are getting in on the act. "They are looking for diversions and they are going back to things they used to do for fun."

Another dance man says there's an increasing demand for lessons in Latin steps. "There are more cruises, believe it or not, even though the cruise ships are supposed to be dying."

ALCOHOL: The New Teen-Age Turn-On

Overlook Alcohol as Drug

By Alton Blakeslee and Brian Sullivan

THIRD IN A SERIES

Late one night, the town's friendly policemen brought the boy, 17, home in their patrol car. He had been wobbling his dangerous way across street intersections while walking home.

He was drunk.

"Well! At least he's not on drugs!" his father told the officers by way of apology and gratitude for their solicitude.

There are such instances of parents actually expressing a sense of relief that it was only alcohol affecting a teen-age son or daughter, says Dr. Frank Seixas of the National Council on Alcoholism.

They overlook the fact that alcohol is a drug, one of the oldest in human history, a sometimes relaxing boon that can become as destructive, or more destructive, a poison than other addictive drugs.

Only a few years ago, many parents were badly frightened over the popularity and abuse of mind-affecting or psychotropic drugs, ranging from marijuana to LSD and HEROIN and COCAINE.

Much of their alarm over marijuana was misplaced, in the judgment of some observers, because back in the 1930s, marijuana had been misrepresented as being an instigation to robbery, rape and immorality.

In the 1960s, young people began experimenting with or using marijuana on a fairly regular basis, and most found it to be a mild stimulant with largely pleasant reactions, when used in moderation.

But parents, teachers and some public officials shrilled prophecies of doom from "pot" —which didn't jibe with the users' actual experiences. Parents, not well-informed, became suspect as a source of knowledge. Young people, in the opinion of some observers, felt parents and authorities were lying when they warned against the dangers of heroin. Refusing to accept the cautions against this "hard" drug, many became addicted, and some died.

But soon teen-agers did see what heroin and other potent drugs were doing to their peers, and many decided not to go along. Stringent laws calling for jail terms for possession of heroin were a deterrent, too.

Alcohol can produce a "high," if of a somewhat different sort than marijuana or LSD. Teenagers witnessed their parents and other adults getting high on alcohol.

Further, in America and other societies, drinking is associated with attaining adulthood, says Dr. Seixas. Many young people now are becoming "adults" earlier. Voting age has been lowered to 18. Sexual activity is more open, if not beginning earlier. Youngsters in their teens enter military service. Girls experience an earlier menarche.

And drinking has become more socially acceptable. Some 95 million Americans use alcohol, by some estimates, with 9 million to 10 million becoming alcoholics. Liquor is well advertised, and so is beer.

Drugs such as heroin are not only dangerous, but can be very expensive, giving another reason for teen-agers with limited funds to choose alcohol as their outlet or crutch.

Nowadays, "there is just less hassle around the use of alcoholic beverages" compared with other drugs, says Donald Phelps, director of the division of prevention, Youth Education Branch, of the National Institute of Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism.

Further, he says, people know there is quality control in the production of beer, wine and whiskies —except perhaps for moonshine —whereas drugs bought on the street could be dangerously adulterated. "You know you can get high from the alcoholic drink, but with some other drugs, you don't know. Parents don't tend to get as uptight about it."

Thieves, take wood, nails

Thieves took plywood and nails from a house construction site on North Ingram Street in the Mini-Farms area, according to Scott County Deputy Sheriff Gerald Inman.

Taken were 35 four-by-eight sheets of plywood value at $204.75 and two 50-pound boxes of nails valued at $20. The theft occurred sometime Wednesday night or Thursday morning, Inman said.

Too Much Wall Street In Thriller?

THE PETRODOLLAR TAKEOVER. By Peter Tanous & Paul Rubinstein. Putnam. 254 Pages. $7.95.

Back when the Arabs hiked petroleum prices and began piling up petrodollars, their subsequent foreign investment plunges into various business ventures made some governments uneasy.

Immediate public and business concern was heightened as the Arabs' riches were invested in American businesses, generating some fears of takeover possibilities. This novel, the latest of an ever-increasing library of books growing out of the Mideast woes, proposes the possibility of the government of Saudi Arabia gaining a controlling interest of General Motors through stock purchases.

It's an interesting idea, but too quickly and thinly developed at key points of the plot. The Wall Street background of the authors seems to be a hindrance: too much narrative given the technical side of the world of finance. For example, the same wordage is given to the procedure of selling stock on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange as is given the President deciding to back down on challenging the Arabs.

It reminds one of magazine-length stories. It wouldn't have been bad as a made-for-TV movie but, unfortunately, it wound up as a book. "The Petrodollar Takeover" fits in that vast array of literary efforts these days that can best be described as skillful mediocrity.

CIRCUIT COURT

CHARLESTON — A Circuit Court jury Wednesday returned a verdict in favor of the defendant Paul Wayne Stallings in a personal injuries suit brought by Lanny Lewis.

The jury deliberated about 20 minutes before returning their decision in favor of Stalllings, who had been charged with driving his motor boat in a careless and negligent manor on May 13, 1974, causing Lewis, who was a passenger in the boat, to collide with the boat's windshield and other parts of the boat.

Lewis had sought damages of $25,000.

A contract suit, filed by Herbert and Lois St. Cin against Superior Security Plan, Inc., was dismissed with prejudice at the cost of the defendant.

People Again Dance Gentle One-Two-Three

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Dancing to rock music is getting a twirl for its money from folks trying the waltz again.

Dance school managers in this area say people of all ages are returning to ballroom dancing but the greatest increase is among students in their late teens and early 20s.

At Yale about 30 students have added fox trot lessons to their curriculums. The weekly classes are taught by two students, Rosanne Pollack and Leonard Sperling.

"I think that people are tired of inventing their own things and jumping around and shaking their bodies all over the place," says Miss Pollack.

"Ballroom dancing offers some structure, but yet you can improvise on your own. And it gives you a chance to dance with your partner."

Dancing cheek-to-cheek, instead of across the room from each other, has achieved a degree of popularity at the University of Connecticut where a ballroom dancing club was organized last year by chemical engineering professor Richard Stephenson and a professional dance instructor friend.

One dance school manager says some people find the singles ballroom a better place to meet than a singles bar room. That, plus the nostalgia kick and tough economic times contribute to growing popularity of ballroom hoofing, the manager says.

The manager says older couples whose blue-chip stocks have dipped 10 points are getting in on the act. "They are looking for diversions and they are going back to things they used to do for fun."

Another dance man says there's an increasing demand for lessons in Latin steps. "There are more cruises, believe it or not, even though the cruise ships are supposed to be dying."

ALCOHOL: The New Teen-Age Turn-On

Overlook Alcohol as Drug

By Alton Blakeslee and Brian Sullivan

THIRD IN A SERIES

Late one night, the town's friendly policemen brought the boy, 17, home in their patrol car. He had been wobbling his dangerous way across street intersections while walking home.

He was drunk.

"Well! At least he's not on drugs!" his father told the officers by way of apology and gratitude for their solicitude.

There are such instances of parents actually expressing a sense of relief that it was only alcohol affecting a teen-age son or daughter, says Dr. Frank Seixas of the National Council on Alcoholism.

They overlook the fact that alcohol is a drug, one of the oldest in human history, a sometimes relaxing boon that can become as destructive, or more destructive, a poison than other addictive drugs.

Only a few years ago, many parents were badly frightened over the popularity and abuse of mind-affecting or psychotropic drugs, ranging from marijuana to LSD and HEROIN and COCAINE.

Much of their alarm over marijuana was misplaced, in the judgment of some observers, because back in the 1930s, marijuana had been misrepresented as being an instigation to robbery, rape and immorality.

In the 1960s, young people began experimenting with or using marijuana on a fairly regular basis, and most found it to be a mild stimulant with largely pleasant reactions, when used in moderation.

But parents, teachers and some public officials shrilled prophecies of doom from "pot" —which didn't jibe with the users' actual experiences. Parents, not well-informed, became suspect as a source of knowledge. Young people, in the opinion of some observers, felt parents and authorities were lying when they warned against the dangers of heroin. Refusing to accept the cautions against this "hard" drug, many became addicted, and some died.

But soon teen-agers did see what heroin and other potent drugs were doing to their peers, and many decided not to go along. Stringent laws calling for jail terms for possession of heroin were a deterrent, too.

Alcohol can produce a "high," if of a somewhat different sort than marijuana or LSD. Teen-agers witnessed their parents and other adults getting high on alcohol.

Further, in America and other societies, drinking is associated with attaining adulthood, says Dr. Seixas. Many young people now are becoming "adults" earlier. Voting age has been lowered to 18. Sexual activity is more open, if not beginning earlier. Youngsters in their teens enter military service. Girls experience an earlier menarche.

And drinking has become more socially acceptable. Some 95 million Americans use alcohol, by some estimates, with 9 million to 10 million becoming alcoholics. Liquor is well advertised, and so is beer.

Drugs such as heroin are not only dangerous, but can be very expensive, giving another reason for teen-agers with limited funds to choose alcohol as their outlet or crutch.

The filming of 'Midway'

Making war for movies

By Dick Kleiner

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — Every motion picture has its own peculiar problems, but when Jack Smight set out to direct "Midway" he was up against a tough one.

He had to reconstruct one of the biggest naval battles of all time — with one old aircraft carrier and ten planes.

In one sense, he was unlucky with this assignment. In another way, he lucked out. He was unlucky because the big battle was such a major triumph for the American Navy — with the result that no Japanese warships survived the war and therefore none were around to film on.

But he lucked out because, for some reason, our Navy had the foresight to film the entire battle in color. So he can integrate the Navy footage into the stuff he shot. He estimates that from ten to 12 per cent of the film's two hours and 20 minutes will be the material shot by the Navy cameramen on the spot.

THUNDER AND FURY of the Battle of Midway is recreated in an artist's conception of the epic sea conflict.

"That Navy footage was shot in 16 mm," he says, "but the Disney lab was able to reconstruct it and blow it up into Panavision size. It looks like it was shot yesterday."

There is one World War II aircraft carrier — the USS Lexington — still in service. And the Navy let Smight and his stars and crew shoot aboard the old Lex. They filmed ashore, when the big carrier was tied up at Pensacola, and filmed at sea, off Texas.

But there was one problem during the at-sea portions. The problem was left over from the time when 20th Century-Fox made its epic about Pearl Harbor, "Tora, Tora, Tora!"

At that time, Sen. William Proxmire complained about a movie company using a Navy ship on which to film something for private profit. He had a point, of course — making private money at public expense.

"So we had to shoot around the Navy while they were working," Smight says. "It made it hard on us — there were lots of minor accidents but fortunately nobody was seriously hurt."

Getting World War II vintage planes was almost as tough as finding ships. Smight says they finally rounded up ten old aircraft — F4Fs, PBYs and torpedo bombers. When they needed Japanese Zeroes, they repainted the F4Fs and hoped nobody could tell the difference.

While ships and planes were hard to come by, people weren't. Smight and his staff found a whole bunch of admirals and lesser officers who had served at the big battle and who were pleased to serve as technical advisors.

Locations were not too tough, either. The sea sequences were easy — water is water, so the water off the Texas coast looked identical to the water in the far Pacific. They did have to transform a spot up the coast from Los Angeles — Point Mugu — into Midway Island.

"But it wasn't too hard," Smight says. "Point Mugu has sand dunes, just like Midway. We built an airstrip, a tower, some barricades, things like that. We did a lot of strafing and bombing there."

The facts of the Midway battle, Smight says, are pretty well agreed on by all authorities, American and Japanese. The battle was well documented by both sides, by historians and military and naval authorities. This, plus the fact that the film had complete cooperation by our Defense Department and Navy Department and the Japanese government, makes the film, Smight believes, totally accurate.

"We had to change one thing in the script," Smight says. "We had had Admiral Yamamoto, who was in charge of the Japanese Navy, getting the news of Doolittle's raid on Tokyo while he was in a geisha house.

"Well, we got a letter from his widow saying that just wasn't true. So we changed it."

There was also the problem of haircuts to contend with. Aboard the Lexington, real sailors were used as extras. But, of course, today's Navy men generally have long hair and many have beards and mustaches — which they weren't allowed to have during World War II.

Smight announced to the Lexington's crew that he would use anybody who wanted in the film, but they would all have to get a '42 haircut. He says at first very few of them would go through that torture, but eventually the excitement of the filming made them all want to join in.

He had no trouble finding stars to play his leading roles. He says there were calls from most major stars, wanting to be a part of the project. He wound up with people like Charlton Heston, Glenn Ford, Henry Fonda, Robert Mitchum, James Coburn, Cliff Robertson and Robert Wagner. And, as Yamamoto, the great Japanese actor, Toshiro Mifune.

What with one thing and another, Smight says the final film — he's editing it now — will cost somewhere between $5 and $6 million. It will be released in June, 1976, to coincide both with the anniversary of the battle and with the bicentennial celebration.

The major problem, cinematically, he says, is that the film is like a jigsaw puzzle.

"There are no bulk scenes," he says. (A bulk scene is one that has some length to it.) "Each page of the script has about ten or 12 scenes on it. It was very tough keeping in mind what went before and came after each scene we shot."

What Smight likes best about the project is that it is a war story without being a flag-waving story.

"Normally, after Viet Nam," he says, "a war story would not attract me. But this one is different. We present both sides as the battle develops, something like a chess game. We're not waving any flags, just telling a story."

Ben Vereen plays 'Satchomo'

NEW YORK (AP) — Ben Vereen, one of the most gifted performers to come down the pike in recent years, is portraying one of the greats of jazz Sunday in an ABC movie called "Louis Armstrong — Chicago Style."

The film, set in 1931 in Chicago, dramatizes an incident early in Armstrong's life when a mob boss tried to muscle in on his career and hire him for one of his clubs; the mob got rough when Pops said no.

The 90-minute show has an excellent music sound track and Vereen does a marvellous job of depicting Armstrong, catching not only his unique vocal style but also his fabled good nature and warmth.

Unfortunately, Vereen and the rest of the cast are saddled with a script by James Lee that seems oddly limp, lacks focus and at times is maudlin. Which is a shame, considering the subject.

The proceedings commence in a small, scroungy night club on the outskirts of Los Angeles, where the young trumpeter is working while his manager (Red Buttons) plots ways of getting him to the big time.

Problem is, Louis isn't that interested, preferring to settle in Los Angeles than go back on the road. His manager, speaking of his meal ticket's current audience, sneers: "Buncha rubes. Chicago's where the action is."

It seems the manager is none too ethical. He gets Armstrong framed on a marijuana rap — having planted the weed in the trumpeter's coat and Armstrong is forced to leave with him for the Windy City.

After a powerful en route scene in which Armstrong is threatened by rednecks at a rural gas station, they arrive in Chicago.

A job the manager promised doesn't materialize. Times are lean until an old friend (effectively portrayed by Lee De Broux), a white man, offers Armstrong the chance to work in the small night club he owns.

Word of mouth about this amazing musician soon has the joint packed each night. Then comes a mob boss who unsuccessfully tries to hire Armstrong, at a much higher salary.

It's about here that the show starts losing steam, veering from scenes of music, romance, and mob machinations without much cohesion. None of it is very believeable and parts of it are just boring.

I hate to see this happen. The producers had a chance to do justice to the memory of one of America's finest jazzmen and somehow blew it.

The case of the immature seed crime

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

If ignorance was bliss, Timmy was in heaven. The only thing he knew was how to run around with a wild bunch of kids and to sow his wild oats. When he tried to sow another kind of seed, however, a marijuana seed, his bliss blistered into trouble with the law. He was picked up by the police and was charged with illegally possessing marijuana.

Battling his case in court, Timmy rested his defense on a technicality.

"My arrest was premature," he insisted, "since I didn't have any marijuana. What I had was marijuana seeds. And, since anybody knows that the most ambitious seed can go to pot, rot instead of pot, I might never have had any marijuana. Consequently, I can't be convicted."

"He sure can," responded the prosecuting attorney. "The evil of marijuana is in the seed. And to try to distinguish between the seed and the plant is like trying to separate Dr. Jekyll from Mr. Hyde. It can't be done. Consequently, Timmy is guilty as charged."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you convict Timmy of illegally possessing marijuana?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that marijuana seeds do not contain a narcotic substance and cannot be used in the usual way to obtain a narcotic effect. That, therefore, concluded the judge, possessing marijuana seeds does not amount to possessing marijuana illegally.

The filming of 'Midway'

Making war for movies

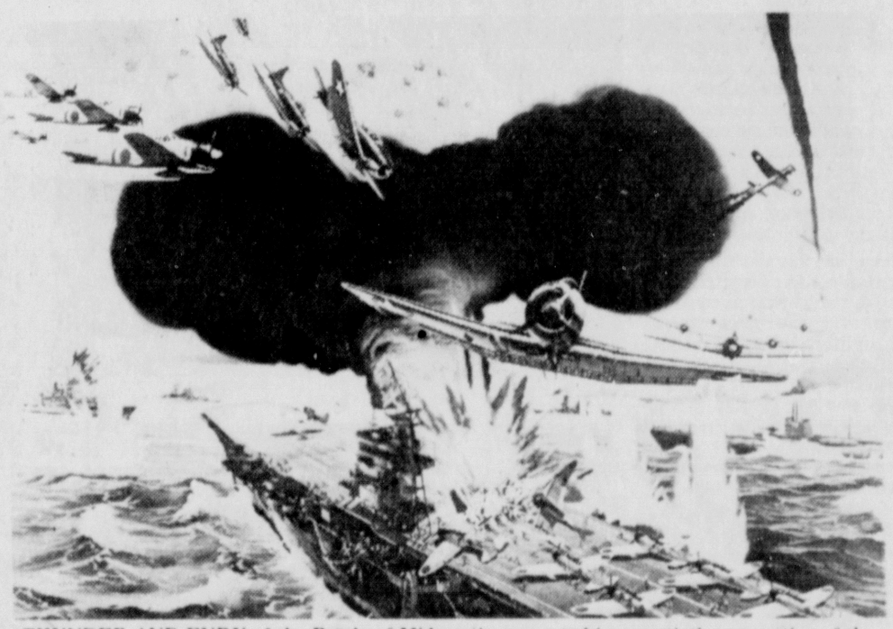
By Dick Kleiner

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — Every motion picture has its own peculiar problems, but when Jack Smight set out to direct "Midway" he was up against a tough one.

He had to reconstruct one of the biggest naval battles of all time — with one old aircraft carrier and ten planes.

In one sense, he was unlucky with this assignment. In another way, he lucked out. He was unlucky because the big battle was such a major triumph for the American Navy — with the result that no Japanese warships survived the war and therefore none were around to film on.

But he lucked out because, for some reason, our Navy had the foresight to film the entire battle in color. So he can integrate the Navy footage into the stuff he shot. He estimates that from ten to 12 per cent of the film's two hours and 20 minutes will be the material shot by the Navy cameramen on the spot.



THUNDER AND FURY of the Battle of Midway is recreated in an artist's conception of the epic sea conflict.

"That Navy footage was shot in 16 mm," he says, "but the Disney lab was able to reconstruct it and blow it up into Panavision size. It looks like it was shot yesterday."

There is one World War II aircraft carrier — the USS Lexington — still in service. And the Navy let Smight and his stars and crew shoot aboard the old Lex. They filmed ashore, when the big carrier was tied up at Pensacola, and filmed at sea, off Texas.

But there was one problem during the at-sea portions. The problem was left over from the time when 20th Century-Fox made its epic about Pearl Harbor, "Tora, Tora, Tora!"

At that time, Sen. William Proxmire complained about a movie company using a Navy ship on which to film something for private profit. He had a point, of course — making private money at public expense.

"So we had to shoot around the Navy while they were working," Smight says. "It made it hard on us — there were lots of minor accidents but fortunately nobody was seriously hurt."

Getting World War II vintage planes was almost as tough as finding ships. Smight says they finally rounded up ten old aircraft — F4Fs, PBYs and torpedo bombers. When they needed Japanese Zeroes, they repainted the F4Fs and hoped nobody could tell the difference.

While ships and planes were hard to come by, people weren't. Smight and his staff found a whole bunch of admirals and lesser officers who had served at the big battle and who were pleased to serve as technical advisors.

Locations were not too tough, either. The sea sequences were easy — water is water, so the water off the Texas coast looked identical to the water in the far Pacific. They did have to transform a spot up the coast from Los Angeles — Point Mugu — into Midway Island.

"But it wasn't too hard," Smight says. "Point Mugu has sand dunes, just like Midway. We built an airstrip, a tower, some barricades, things like that. We did a lot of strafing and bombing there."

The facts of the Midway battle, Smight says, are pretty well agreed on by all authorities, American and Japanese. The battle was well documented by both sides, by historians and military and naval authorities. This, plus the fact that the film had complete cooperation by our Defense Department and Navy Department and the Japanese government, makes the film, Smight believes, totally accurate.

"We had to change one thing in the script," Smight says. "We had had Admiral Yamamoto, who was in charge of the Japanese Navy, getting the news of Doolittle's raid on Tokyo while he was in a geisha house.

"Well, we got a letter from his widow saying that just wasn't true. So we changed it."

There was also the problem of haircuts to contend with. Aboard the Lexington, real sailors were used as extras. But, of course, today's Navy men generally have long hair and many have beards and mustaches — which they weren't allowed to have during World War II.

Smight announced to the Lexington's crew that he would use anybody who wanted in the film, but they would all have to get a '42 haircut. He says at first very few of them would go through that torture, but eventually the excitement of the filming made them all want to join in.

He had no trouble finding stars to play his leading roles. He says there were calls from most major stars, wanting to be a part of the project. He wound up with people like Charlton Heston, Glenn Ford, Henry Fonda, Robert Mitchum, James Coburn, Cliff Robertson and Robert Wagner. And, as Yamamoto, the great Japanese actor, Toshiro Mifune.

What with one thing and another, Smight says the final film — he's editing it now — will cost somewhere between $5 and $6 million. It will be released in June, 1976, to coincide both with the anniversary of the battle and with the bicentennial celebration.

The major problem, cinematically, he says, is that the film is like a jigsaw puzzle.

"There are no bulk scenes," he says. (A bulk scene is one that has some length to it.) "Each page of the script has about ten or 12 scenes on it. It was very tough keeping in mind what went before and came after each scene we shot."

What Smight likes best about the project is that it is a war story without being a flag-waving story.

"Normally, after Viet Nam," he says, "a war story would not attract me. But this one is different. We present both sides as the battle develops, something like a chess game. We're not waving any flags, just telling a story."

Ben Vereen plays 'Satchomo'

NEW YORK (AP) — Ben Vereen, one of the most gifted performers to come down the pike in recent years, is portraying one of the greats of jazz Sunday in an ABC movie called "Louis Armstrong — Chicago Style."

The film, set in 1931 in Chicago, dramatizes an incident early in Armstrong's life when a mob boss tried to muscle in on his career and hire him for one of his clubs; the mob got rough when Pops said no.

The 90-minute show has an excellent music sound track and Vereen does a marvellous job of depicting Armstrong, catching not only his unique vocal style but also his fabled good nature and warmth.

Unfortunately, Vereen and the rest of the cast are saddled with a script by James Lee that seems oddly limp, lacks focus and at times is maudlin. Which is a shame, considering the subject.

The proceedings commence in a small, scroungy night club on the outskirts of Los Angeles, where the young trumpeter is working while his manager (Red Buttons) plots ways of getting him to the big time.

Neel tried to buy a package of cigarettes with a fake $20 bill.

The checker at the grocery store on the south side of Sikeston suspected that the bill was counterfeit and called the store manager.

Neel offered to take the $20 bill back and pay with a $1 bill. He then tried to grab the $20, ran from the store, jumped into a car with Parker and took off.

The car was spotted about five miles south of Sikeston and stopped by police. A search of the vehicle turned up $960 in counterfeit $20 bills hidden under the dash board in a pint milk carton.

Police said the men were believed to have passed other counterfeit bills in Sikeston.

Lilley said Parker and Neel had no relation to Warnick and Spurlock. He said the two pairs of men did not know each other.

time later they returned to Crump's home.

Moses said Witty laid two plastic bags on the kitchen table in Crump's home an told him to take his pick. The bags contained plant-like material, later determined to be marijuana. The officer testified he paid Witty $15 for one bag.

The transaction between the officers and Dale Morgan took place in a cemetery near Charleston. He allegedly sold them 21 grams of marijuana, which reportedly was homegrown. Morgan is free on $15,000 bond.

Rick Witty is accused of selling the officers tetrahydrocannabinol, commonly called THC or hash oil. The transactions between the officers and Witty took place in a park, referred to as the fair grounds, in the southeast section of East Prairie. He reportedly sold them a gram of the substance for $10 on July 30 and is free on $10,000 bond.

Marijuana, reportedly homegrown, was sold to the officers by David Bright on Aug. 21 at Bright's home in East Prairie for $15. The officers said they followed Bright to his home the night of Aug. 21 and were shown a styrofoam cooler containing plastic bags of plant-like material, which Bright said was available in $5, $10 and $15 quantitites. He is free on $2,000 cash bond.

Phillip Carlyle is charged with three counts of selling a controlled substance (marijuana) on March 12, Oct. 7 and Oct. 15, 1975. He is free on $2,000 bond.

Testimony during the hearings indicated Roy Vernon Dean was present at most of the meetings between the officers and those charged. Defense attorneys classified him as an informant and requested that Judge Brown not make his rulings until Dean can be returned for questioning. It was indicated that he is attending a technical school in Oklahoma.

Louie Pool of East Prairie, charged with two counts of first-degree murder, was released from custody on $10,000 bonds on each count and a preliminary hearing was set for Feb. 11.

Pool is accused of the Christmas Day, 1975 shooting deaths of Mrs. Mary Mitchell of East Prairie and Enoch Reeves of Charleston Route One.

being financed, not by tax revenues, but by borrowing, Hearnes said.

As a result, he added, a high inflation rate threatens the survival of middle- class America.

"For many years warnings about the dangers of deficit spending and the increasing national debt fell on deaf ears," Hearnes said.

"Voters are beginning to wonder who is responsible for the escalating prices," he said. "The answer is that Congress must accept the lion's share of the blame for these conditions."

The American people must elect leaderss who will handle their tax money more cautiously and wisely, he said.

"I believe that a meaningful step in the right direction could be taken by consolidating and trimming the cumbersome and inefficient federal bureaucracy," Hearnes said.

As an example, he said Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Forrest Matthews estimates that the government could save up to $10 billion a year by eliminating and simplyifying the overlapping programs within his own departments.

"I would bet that other federal agencies contain a similar amount of fat," he said. "Let's not kid ourselves about who is footing the bill."

"We are coming to the sobering realization that a government which tries to do too much for too many ends up doing too little for too few. We must recognize that all of our problems cannot be solved by ever increasing expenditures of federal money -- our money," he said.

Master of Ceremonies Joe Perry Rice III presented 1975 chamber president Wayne Crippen, who gave a resume of the year's accomplishments which he said were a result of all members working together.

Louise Kielhofner conducted the installation of new officers who are: William J. Pfefferkorn, president; Joe Perry Rice III, first vice president; G. R. Whitaker, second vice president; Tom Plummer secretary" and Bill Whistler, treasurer.

Pfefferkorn, the new president, said that "a feeling of unity between business and the community had been brought about by but for our children and grandchildren." Everyone should be involved he said.

The transaction between the officers and Dale Morgan took place in a cemetery near Charleston. He allegedly sold them 21 grams of marijuana, which reportedly was homegrown. Morgan is free on $15,000 bond.

Rick Witty is accused of selling the officers tetrahydrocannabinol, commonly called THC or hash oil. The transactions between the officers and Witty took place in a park, referred to as the fair grounds, in the southeast section of East Prairie. He reportedly sold them a gram of the substance for $10 on July 30 and is free on $10,000 bond.

Marijuana, reportedly homegrown, was sold to the officers by David Bright on Aug. 21 at Bright's home in East Prairie for $15. The officers said they followed Bright to his home the night of Aug. 21 and were shown a styrofoam cooler containing plastic bags of plant-like material, which Bright said was available in $5, $10 and $15 quantitites. He is free on $2,000 cash bond.

Phillip Carlyle is charged with three counts of selling a controlled substance (marijuana) on March 12, Oct. 7 and Oct. 15, 1975. He is free on $2,000 bond.

Testimony during the hearings indicated Roy Vernon Dean was present at most of the meetings between the officers and those charged. Defense attorneys classified him as an informant and requested that Judge Brown not make his rulings until Dean can be returned for questioning. It was indicated that he is attending a technical school in Oklahoma.

Louie Pool of East Prairie, charged with two counts of first-degree murder, was released from custody on $10,000 bonds on each count and a preliminary hearing was set for Feb. 11.

Pool is accused of the Christmas Day, 1975 shooting deaths of Mrs. Mary Mitchell of East Prairie and Enoch Reeves of Charleston Route One.

being financed, not by tax revenues, but by borrowing, Hearnes said.

As a result, he added, a high inflation rate threatens the survival of middle- class America.

"For many years warnings about the dangers of deficit spending and the increasing national debt fell on deaf ears," Hearnes said.

"Voters are beginning to wonder who is responsible for the escalating prices," he said."The answer is that Congress must accept the lion's share of the blame for these conditions."

The American people must elect leaderss who will handle their tax money more cautiously and wisely, he said.

"I believe that a meaningful step in the right direction could be taken by consolidating and trimming the cumbersome and inefficient federal bureaucracy," Hearnes said.

As an example, he said Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Forrest Matthews estimates that the government could save up to $10 billion a year by eliminating and simplyifying the overlapping programs within his own departments.

"I would bet that other federal agencies contain a similar amount of fat," he said. "Let's not kid ourselves about who is footing the bill."

"We are coming to the sobering realization that a government which tries to do too much for too many ends up doing too little for too few. We must recognize that all of our problems cannot be solved by ever increasing expenditures of federal money -- our money," he said.

Master of Ceremonies Joe Perry Rice III presented 1975 chamber president Wayne Crippen, who gave a resume of the year's accomplishments which he said were a result of all members working together.

Louise Kielhofner conducted the installation of new officers who are: William J. Pfefferkorn, president; Joe Perry Rice III, first vice president; G. R. Whitaker, second vice president; Tom Plummer secretary" and Bill Whistler, treasurer.

Pfefferkorn, the new president, said that "a feeling of unity between business and the community had been brought about by but for our children and grandchildren." Everyone should be involved he said.
